ONLY 3 MPs ABSENT

Death Penalty Out by 8 Votes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A bill to abolish capital punishment in Canada was given approval in principle by a vote of 133 to 125 in the Commons today.

It now goes to committee for clause-by-clause study and possible amendment.

All three major parties divided on the issue as MPs participated in a "free vote" allowing them to vote by conscience rather than along party lines.

Clark was the only leader out of step with his party's voting position as Conservatives voted strongly for retention of capital punishment. His lead was followed by Victoria's Conservative MP, Allan McKinnon.

After the vote was tallied, a wave of applause rolled through the ranks of the opponents of hanging, who have been fighting for 10 years now for the moment of victory.

But Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, the bill's sponsor, was pale and restrained. He applauded almost prayerfully.

The eight-vote margin meant that the bill is still on shaky ground.

It must pass through the Commons justice committee, then return to the Commons for third reading.

If it gets through those stages, easy Senate passage is expected.

Only three members weren't present for the vote.

All wanted to keep the death penalty: Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon), Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris), and Albanie Morin (L—Louis-Hebert), who is seriously ill in hospital.

Speaker James Jerome does not vote.

Two of the 264 Commons seats are vacant, leaving a possible vote of 262, including the Speaker, who only votes in a tie.

Their vote was offset by the 16 new Democrats and 18 Conservatives who voted for it.

There were cheers from abolitionists as two rural Ontario Conservatives — Perrin Beatty and Bruce Halliday voted for the bill. They had been wavering.

Simma Holt (L—Vancouver—Kingsway), her fractured leg in a cast, was cheered as she voted to keep hanging. Stanley Haidasz (L—Toronto Parkdale), his head in a white turban as a result of an operation on his neck last week, voted for abolition.

It was one of the heaviest Commons votes in recent years, outdone in the 1970s only by a vote of no confidence in the government May 8, 1974, in which 260 members rose.

They defeated the government 137 to 123.

3 KILLED ON MALAHAT

A two-car head-on collision on the Malahat Monday night took the lives of three people including a 42-year-old woman from Scotland on the second day of her visit to Vancouver Island.

Dead are Elizabeth Reed of Edinburgh, Scotland, Violet Haddow, 61, of Cowichan Station and George Davies, 45, of Sooke.

Their deaths bring to eight the number of persons killed on Island roads since Friday.

The two women were passengers in a car driven by Mrs. Haddow's husband, William, 61.

Both he and another passenger, Mrs. Helen Reed, 79, address not known, were taken to Cowichan District Hospital with multiple injuries.

Haddow was later transferred to Royal Jubilee Hospital where his condition this morning was reported as fair.

Mrs. Reed was listed in satisfactory condition in the intensive care unit of the Duncan hospital.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said the accident occurred at about 10:20 p.m. on a stretch of the Malahat about 21 miles north of Victoria and a mile south of the Bamberton lookout.

Davies, alone in his car, was driving south; the Haddow vehicle was northbound.

A police spokesman said the collision appears to have happened in the northbound lane.

An inquest will be held but no date has been set as yet.

The site of the accident was less than a mile away from where a fully-loaded bread truck sliced a car in two and plunged 50 feet down an embankment early Friday.

Airlines Cut Staff, Sue Pilots for $7M

Times Sews Services

Canada's airlines began laying off their employees today as pilots entered the third day of their refusal to work because of "unsafe flight operations."

Air Canada announced in Montreal that it will begin laying off its 10,000 unionized employees across the country beginning at midnight tonight.

Alberta-owned Pacific Western Airlines said in Vancouver it has shut down its operations and is laying off its 2,000 staff.

Three major airlines also announced in Montreal today a lawsuit claiming at least $7 million in damages from the pilots.

"This claim is open-ended, which means that the amount could increase depending on the length of the strike," said a spokesman for Air Canada, which, along with CP Air and Eastern Provincial Airways, filed the damage suit late Monday.

Air Canada has estimated its daily losses at $3 million since Sunday when the 2,300 pilots declared air space "unsafe for flight operations."

The bilingualism controversy has spread to international airlines as pilots for a major international airline today declared Canadian airspace unsafe.

A spokesman for the pilots' association of Scandinavian Airlines representing pilots from Denmark, Norway and Sweden said the association decided today that it is not safe to fly into Canada. Scandinavian had cancelled flights to and from Mirabel International Airport north of Montreal.

It will mean delays of a day or two for first-class mail headed for eastern Canada.

It will also mean about 270,000 envelopes daily that would have been whisked by air will join about 130,000 heftier bundles as they travel second, third or fourth class out of the city.

All will be transported by truck and train throughout Canada or to United States cities where they can go airmail again.

All mail will now leave Victoria at normal surface mail times: 5:35 a.m., 12:15 p.m., 2 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Ken Maley, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association (CALPA), said in Montreal that even though controllers are back in their towers, the pilot's union had no alternative but to declare the air traffic system unsafe for instrument flight opera-

POLICE CATCH POLICE THIEF

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — The burglar tried to steal an electronic device from a police radio transmitter station. It turned out to be the silent alarm linked to the Bellevue police department.

Police said Monday a search of the burglar's home uncovered numerous stolen items, including electronic gear from the police transmitter station that finally gave the alarm. Also found was equipment needed to make a pipe bomb.

The man, arrested and being held in the King County jail, is a University of Washington engineering student.

Battles Batter Beirut

The fighting—described by neutral sources as major—broke out despite the arrival Monday of a 1,000-man advance party of an Arab league force to police a truce, the 39th such fragile ceasefire in the 14-month-old Lebanese civil war.

Mortar fire could be heard throughout Beirut. The shells showered down on Moslem-held and Christian-held districts, creating new ruins in residential and business areas.

Escorted by Palestinian and Arab gunners, the 200 foreigners, set out from Beirut today on probably the final British-organized convoy to Syria.

The departure of six buses and about 30 private cars carrying nationals of 27 countries, already twice-delayed by fighting near Beirut airport, was put off another two hours until Syria had withdrawn troops from an intersection south of the airport.

CBC TECHS THREATEN OLYMPIC BLACKOUT

MONTREAL (CP) — CBC radio and television programs orginating from Montreal were disrupted today as about 1,100 technicians of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians continued a work stoppage that began Monday.

The French network is replacing local programming on radio with three-hour tapes and with a movie beginning at 11 a.m. on television. The English network is also using tapes on radio and network programming on television.

Technicians said they would return by the early afternoon for CBC regular broadcasting but they would stay away from Olympics programming preparation until their demands are met.

NABET technicians went out Monday morning to back demands to increase their daily expense allowance to $25 from $19. They also want a special bilingualism premium.

Meanwhile, the CBC filed for an injunction in Quebec Superior Court Monday to prevent walkouts by technicians involved in Olympics programming.

In its petition, the CBC said it "could not accept a walkout which would threaten the televising of the Games.

ROOM AT TOP $14.2M CASH

LONDON (UPI) — A syndicate of Arab businessmen who "simply wanted the best hotel in the world" has paid nearly $14.2 million for the Dorchester Hotel.

The McAlpine family, who have controlled the Dorchester since 1931, have resolutely resisted previous offers to buy the hotel overlooking Hyde Park.

But the Arabs made an offer they could not refuse. The buyers paid the money in cash, a spokeswoman at the hotel said today.

Two men, Dr. Lucien Dahdah, a former Lebanese foreign minister, and Sheikh Najib Alamuddin, chairman of Middle East Airlines, concluded the deal on behalf of a company called Pageguide.

They also agreed to pick up a bill for more than $1.77 million for redecorating and refurnishing the five-star Park Lane hotel, owned by the McAlpine family.

"I know very little about the new owners apart from the fact that they have enormous resources," said Lord Pritchard, the man appointed chairman of the new firm.

"They said they simply wanted the best hotel in the world and they've got it," he said.

"I pointed out it would take a long time before they saw a return on an investment of more than nine million pounds (15.9 million)," he said. "They just weren't interested."

The hotel has 290 rooms at around $51 a night, but a suite there costs anything between $89 and $266.

The hotel's managing director, Robin Oldland, said despite its new ownership the Dorchester would be unchanged.

"I look forward to the future with curiosity and enthusiasm," he said. "We shall maintain our discreet dignity, our resolute Englishness — dare I say it? — our stiff upper lip."

Socreds Speak As Opposition Boycotts House

Government MLAs made their speeches and took their votes on government bills, but the opposition benches remained empty throughout the morning sitting.

The opposition had promised to return later today for the normal 2 p.m. sitting.

All NDP members and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Tory leader Scott Wallace started their boycott shortly after midnight Monday at the end of a stormy night sitting which ended in a hail of legislative rule-books directed at Speaker Ed Smith.

The boycott was sparked by a ruling by Smith that a government member had the right to adjourn debate at about 11:30 p.m., effectively cutting off a speech by Gibson on an amendment to the Government Re-organization Act.

The house adjourned but then sat again at 12:01 a.m. in an extraordinary early morning sitting where Smith took about 20 minutes to explain his ruling to the empty opposition benches.

At the end of the regular night sitting, after a long, angry argument on the ruling, Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert) and Bill King (NDP — Revelstoke-Slocan) threw their rule-books in Smith's direction and Lorne Nicolson (NDP — Nelson-Creston) tore the pages from his book and threw them in the air.

COUGAR CLEARED

SASKATOON (CP) — Two charges of assault against Greg Tebbutt of Victoria Cougars, were discharged Monday at the conclusion of a preliminary hearing in magistrate's court.

But Tim Williams, Tebutt's team-mate, will face one charge of assault in connection with the same incident when he appears at the September sittings of Court of Queen's bench in Saskatoon.

Black Riots Simmer

JOHANNESBURG — Police with orders to open fire on rioters guarded a tense peace early today in the country's simmering black townships, scene of the bloodiest racial violence in South Africa this century.

Following a weekend lull, the rioting and looting that devastated townships ringing Johannesburg for three days last week erupted anew in widely scattered parts of the country, including the administrative capital, Pretoria.

Justice and police minister Jimmy Kruger told parliament 10 blacks were killed on Monday, bringing the five-day toll of 139 dead — all but two of them black.

Police said 50 of the black victims were shot by police, who fired directly into the rampaging mobs on several occasions.

Kruger denied that all of the casualties were the result of police action but gave no information on the total number hit by police bullets.

Government officials say that many of the blacks were victims of other blacks on a rampage of violence, arson and looting.

Construction Industry Shutdown Feared

Threatened strike action Wednesday by 600 cement masons in Vancouver could trigger a lockout in the B.C. construction industry.

Strike action would coincide with the "very strong possibility" that 4,500 Teamster truck drivers will strike Wednesday in opposition to the federal Anti-Inflation Board's roll-back of their two-year contract.

In the construction industry, the 17 unions negotiating with the Construction Labor Relations Association have repeatedly been told that as soon as one member construction company is struck all unions will be locked out, a union spokesman said today.

The construction industry shut-down, however, may be averted by a counter wage offer by the CLRA.

The CLRA executive are meeting today and if they come up with another wage offer it will be taken back to the 40,000 construction workers for a vote. The procedure could delay action by the masons.

Frank Stevens, spokesman for the cement masons union, said Monday that the union decided to strike after the CLRA rejected its proposal "which is within federal guidelines."

Contracts expired April 31 and the first offer of an 8 percent wage increase was not retroactive, said John Schibli, secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council.

Any offer exceeding the federal guidelines will go back to the membership, said Schibli.

Meanwhile, union officials are reported to be having difficulty trying to keep Teamster truckers under control in the wake of the AIB's rollback of the contract with 97 B.C. trucking companies represented by the Transport Labor Relations Association.

The board ruled the Teamsters' wage increase should be reduced to 18 per cent from 35 per cent. The ruling would lower the hourly rate after two years to $10.28 from $11.76.

About 1,700 inter-provincial drivers who work for six companies in western Canada have had their wage increase reduced to 8 per cent from 12.4 per cent in a 13-month contract.

The board also ruled that seven Teamsters at an oil supply company here should have their contract increases reduced to 12 per cent from 26.8 per cent over 13 months.

Senator Ed Lawson, Teamsters leader, said he was very disturbed at the board ruling and an appeal might be made.

Election Still Leaves Italy on Brink

ROME (AP) — The Communists made strong gains in the Italian parliamentary elections but were unable to overtake the Christian Democrats, who again missed a majority in the Chamber of Deputies by a sizable margin.

This set the stage today for renewed political uncertainty and another long crisis over the formation of a new Christian Democratic government.

It also meant that action to ease Italy's grave economic crisis is a long way off.

Despite the prospect of continuing political and economic instability, the stock market and the lira rallied because the Communists did not displace the Christian Democrats as the country's largest party.

Gains in early trading on the Milan stock exchange averaged 2.5 per cent, while the lira rose to 844-848 to the U.S. dollar from 854.

"In the long run the continuing political and economic uncertainty will depress the prices again," one broker commented.

More than one out of three voters cast a Communist ballot in the elections Sunday and Monday for the new Chamber of Deputies, boosting the party to 34.4 per cent of the vote from 27.2 per cent 1972. The Vatican-backed Christian Democrats got 38.7 per cent, the same showing they made four years ago.

This gave the Christian Democrats a chance to form their 35th government since the Second World War. But to get the parliamentary majority necessary for effective government, they need to rebuild their centre-left coalition with the Socialists, Social Democrats and Republicans which collapsed in January. And the Socialists said during the election campaign that the coalition was a dead issue.

Communist party secretary Enrico Berlinguer, surveying a sea of clenched fists and red flags below the balcony of his Rome headquarters, said the election result was "a great leap forward."

"We will have to deal with the Christian Democrats, and they will finally realize that they have to deal with us," he said.

However, the Christian Democrats campaigned on a pledge to keep the Communists out of the government. And Berlinguer ruled out "a head-on clash," saying: "The Communist party is not in a hurry to go into the government. It was not before. It is not now, even if it has obtained a big result."

Socreds Talk to Empty Seats

Barrett charged today the government is "drunk with power," and said it had manipulated the hours of the house.

The government Monday stepped up the house sittings in an attempt to get the spring session wrapped up before the end of June. The house normally sits at 2 p.m., with night sittings Tuesday and Thursday, but under the new hours sittings are at 10 a.m., 2 p.m., and again at 8 p.m. every day.

Barrett said the NDP has lawyers "evaluating the whole performance" of the government, including passage of bills while the opposition is absent.

"I doubt if there has ever been a more arrogant group in office," Barrett said.

He called this morning's one-sided sitting of the house a charade and reacted angrily when told Premier Bennett blamed him for the upset.

"He is the premier of the province and it's his business to see the house runs in a business-like fashion," Barrett said.

Bennett this morning said the opposition's actions are "foolish and irresponsible."

The opposition has been acting peculiarly since Barrett returned to the house after his by-election in Vancouver-East, the premier said.

Those participating in the boycott should "come to their senses" and put their responsibilities to the public before "political gamesmanship," Bennett said.

He said any MLAs who don't show up in the house have abrogated their responsibility to constituents.

Bennett himself stayed out of the house for five days last year in an argument with the NDP government over time-limits on estimates.

This morning's "debate" was the quietest since the session began in mid-March.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis gave a short speech on the Home Purchase Assistance Act, he was loudly applauded by his colleagues and the bill quickly passed through second reading.

The government then moved to second reading debate of its controversial mining taxation legislation which has been heavily opposed by the NDP since it was introduced several weeks ago.

Several cabinet ministers and numerous Socred backbenchers who would not normally speak on the legislation voiced their approval of the act which replaces the NDP's Mineral Royalties Act.

The Socred bill later passed.

An attempt by Allmand to introduce an abolition amendment in 1972 also was repelled.

B.C. Provincial Attorney-General Garde Gardom refused comment on the vote.

The vote comes as no surprise to Greater Victoria police chiefs although they almost without exception disagree with it.

"There has got to be a deterrent," said Oak Bay's John Green. "There has to be one."

He noted the narrowness of the abolitionist's victory and said: "Almost the majority had sense . . . or a sense of responsibility lets say."

Esquimalt police chief Art Burton said total abolition "will only place in the hands of the underworld the almost right to bump people off . . . a licence to kill."

the weather

The mass of cool moist air which moved over the province from the Pacific yesterday kept skies cloudy and developed showers in all regions last night. This air mass is moving very slowly eastward and it will give more showers to the interior today. However, a weak ridge of high pressure will cause some clearing on the south coast today and in turn will affect eastern B.C. on Wednesday. A disturbance from the west is heading for the Queen Charlottes. It will start to rain on the north coast this evening. It is expected to weaken and drop slowly southeastward bringing a few showers to the south coast on Wednesday.

Tight Drinking Laws Urged to Curb Cirrhosis

TORONTO (CP) — Deaths caused by cirrhosis of the liver, which had been linked to alcohol abuse, have more than doubled over the last 20 years in Canada and will double again by 1985 unless alcohol laws are tightened, says Wolfgang Schmidt of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation.

He told the 11th annual conference of the Canadian Foundation on Alcohol and Drug Dependencies today that cirrhosis has become the fastest growing killer of people over 25.

"Changes in this are particularly striking among middleaged men," he said. "In 1945, among men 40-49 years of age, there was one cirrhosis death for 115 deaths from all causes; in 1972, one out of 18 deaths in this age group was attributable to cirrhosis.

"This trend becomes particularly important if the impact of alcoholism is judged from the loss of life span or the reduction of working life it causes."

Schmidt said the over-all alcohol consumption of a country has a strong influence on the consumption of the heavy drinker, and encouraging drinking as a part of routine activities, such as meals, does not stop people from becoming alcoholics, but may actually increase the risk.

"In Finland they thought that if alcohol became more easily available it would break the Finn pattern of infrequent but concentrated drinking which ended in intoxication and often violence," he said.

"However, the over-all increase in alcohol use that occurred after their laws were loosened caused an over-all increase that affected drinking at all levels of use with a particularly marked effect on the rate of heavy user."

Schmidt said researchers in Italy and France — the two countries most widely quoted for their civilized, integated drinking habits — have shown those two countries suffer from the highest cirrhosis death rates in the world.

And, he said, based on past trends, Canadian adults will drink 3.95 gallons of alcohol a year by 1985, a 73-per-cent increase over the level of 1972, unless the government tightens up alcohol legislation.

Heaviest drinkers, evidenced by cirrhosis death rates, are found in Newfoundland which has a 14.6 per cent increase in cirrhosis deaths between 1950 and 1972. The Newfoundland cirrhosis death rate is twice the national rate.

Schmidt said recent recommendations made by the Addiction Research Foundation would help curb alcoholism and death by cirrhosis. These include:

—A taxation policy which maintains a reasonably constant relationship between the price of alcohol and the levels of disposable income, or income after taxes in each province.

—A moratorium on further control measures and the adoption of a health-oriented policy with respect to such measures.

—An education program designed to increase public awareness of the personal hazards of heavy alcohol use, the economic and other consequences for society of high consumption levels, and the potential public health benefits of appropriate control measures.

The five-day conference ends Friday.

Stores Offered Compensation

The corner stores at Oak Bay Avenue and Monterey Avenue heard Monday night they will have to be closed for four months for renovations by a developer.

Neil Sinclair of Danclair Developments told a zoning committee meeting the closure would be necessary while new premises for the Bank of Montreal are prepared.

He said his company is "receptive" to an approach by stores holding leases for financial support during the renovations period, with the money to be considered a loan to be repaid later.

The leaseholder of the meat market indicated to the committee he couldn't afford to be closed for four months.

Danclair Developments Ltd. had proposed redevelopment of the southwest corner of the intersection to permit a new building for the Bank of Montreal. But this ran into strong opposition from Oak Bay residents who didn't want the character of Oak Bay Village changed.

The company then told council that because of public concern, it was proposing "rehabilitation" of the property rather than demolition and construction of a new building.

It said the corner's three stores could be occupied by the bank and the dress store and the meat market and bakery could be accommodated in the present bank building.

As for the grocery, Sinclair told the meeting he has been trying to find other locations, including space direcly across Oak Bay Avenue.

KITIMAT ALMOST BACK TO NORMAL

KITIMAT (CP) — Operations at the Aluminum Co. of Canada's smelter here were expected to be back to normal by Thursday as workers began trickling back to work Monday on calls from foremen.

The 1,800 members of the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers had for nearly three weeks been on an illegal work stoppage to protest what they called unsatisfactory wage increases in their latest contract.

On Monday, the plant was operating with 1,200 employees, only a few more than the number that has kept the smelter — the world's second largest — running since union members began their wildcat strike June 2.

However, the makeup of the 1,200 has changed. There now are about 800 hourly-paid workers at the smelter, compared with about 500 a few days ago. The difference is accounted for by management personnel not being at the plant any longer after nearly three weeks of working six hours on and six off.

The decision to return to work was made on the narrowest of margins Sunday when CASAW members split their vote 374 to 374 and Robert's Rules of Order was applied to rule in favor of returning.

S.A. WINE WILL NOT BE BANNED

The provincial government has no intention of changing its policy of stocking South African wines in B.C. liquor stores.

Premier Bill Bennett said international relations were the responsibility of the federal government and "we will not use provincial policies . . . as an international weapon."

Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver Burrard) had asked Bennett whether the recent United Nations resolution condemning actions of the South African police in quelling a student demonstration would be followed by the reversal of B.C.'s South African wine policy.

The former NDP administration banned South African wines in B.C. liquor stores in protest against that country's apartheid policies, but the Social Credit government lifted the ban late last year.

Bennett said the provincial wine policy is "not political in nature."

"This government allows people to make a free choice in this province," the premier said.

Car-Plunge Boat Had Normal Crew

The crew level on the B.C. ferry Queen of Victoria was in line with regulations of the Canada Shipping Act at the time a Saanich man drove his car off the ferry into Active Pass Saturday, Transport Minister Jack Davis said Monday.

Tory leader Scott Wallace asked Davis in the legislature Monday whether there was any lack of safety precautions at the time of the incident.

Davis said an inquiry into the accident is now being conducted, but he believed that the driver was one of the last to board the ferry and that he had driven off the ferry at high speed, in reverse.

The minister said the crew of 31 was in line with shipping regulations.

The incident occurred about 6 p.m. Saturday as the ferry was on its way to Tsawwassen from Swartz Bay.

Crown Broke Word—Jean

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail in a copyright story quotes Jean Marchand, federal environment minister, as saying he lost his driver's licence last year because he was cheated by the Crown after he agreed to plead guilty to leaving the scene of an accident.

The newspaper quotes Marchand as saying in an interview that he pleaded guilty to the criminal charge on the advice of his lawyer, Adrian Hewitt.

The Globe and Mail says Marchand said his lawyer told him he had an agreement with the Crown prosecutor that Marchand would receive only a light fine and no suspension of his driver's licence if he pleaded guilty

Marchand was fined $200 and his licence was suspended for a year last Aug. 29 by Judge Robert Hutton in Ottawa. Marchand's licence was reissued to him on March 8 after he applied to the National Parole Board for its reinstatement.

The newspaper quotes Crown Attorney Andre Berzins as saying that the question of what kind of sentence Marchand would receive if he pleaded guilty was never mentioned during pre-trial discussions with Hewitt.

Listen to the Critics

These are only a handful of the descriptive epithets hurled by Social Credit when it was the opposition at various legislation introduced by the New Democratic Party government in the past three years.

The Land Commission Act was the first step towards total state control of our lives. The Public Official Disclosure Act was something Herman Himmler would have loved. An amendment to the Revenue Act allowing the finance minister to play the stock market was dangerously anti-democratic. A section of the Pacific National Exhibition Incorporation Act allowing the province to void existing contracts for use of facilities on the PNE grounds was attacked as unconscionable.

Yes, in its years out of power Social Credit liked to style itself as the sole guardian of the people's rights. Certain prominent Socreds were known as freedom-fighters, just like the anti-Communist Hungarians who rose in 1956 to protest Soviet oppression.

Despite the sometimes overpowering sanctimony and exaggeration — debating tools, after all — there was at base usually a legitimate grievance aired in their complaints. And the public duly took notice.

The government was forced in many instances to withdraw badly-drawn bills. Changes were made, amendments were introduced, legislation was tightened up and improved.

Now that it is again the governing party in B.C., Social Credit should heed the opposition criticism of Bill 59, the Government Reorganization Act. Mostly, it is a technical bill, almost housecleaning, as its sponsor Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy maintains. But its initial sections warrant most of the bombastic language the Socreds themselves used to beat the NDP over the head with — sweeping powers, blank cheque legislation, dictatorial powers.

These first sections of the bill would amend the Constitution Act, that umbrella statute which defines government and legislative assembly, so that further reference to the legislature to establish new departments and new cabinet portfolios will not be necessary — a considerable change.

Traditionally, governments always needed the approval of the legislature to establish new departments. This was always assured, if the governing party enjoyed a majority, but at least MLAs had a chance (see Hansard 1972-75) to delay and to expose and to ask embarrassing questions — in short, to bring public opinion to bear.

But under Bill 59, there will be no more debate in the legislature on government reorganization. The deliberations will be in secret, behind the closed doors of cabinet meetings and the public will learn about the establishment of new departments or the transfer of separate branches and officials holus bolus to other departments days after the fact when cabinet orders-in-council are published.

The cabinet will also have the power to transfer the "powers, duties and functions of an official, department, or ministry" to another official, department or ministry without reference to the legislature, and can order that money authorized by the legislature for such a function be transferred as well as it "considers appropriate." The money so spent shall be "deemed to have been authorized by the legislature to be so paid and spent."

The meaning of this section of the bill is unclear, but according to some of the critics it is wide enough to undermine seriously the existing system. The government now must present its spending estimates to the legislature for approval, and once voted upon estimates cannot be arbitrarily changed and switched around without coming back to the legislature. If the legislature isn't sitting, the cabinet may issue special spending warrants for unforeseen expenditures, but it certainly may not take one department's spending estimate and apply it elsewhere.

Certainly it's more "efficient" and businesslike to conduct the province's affairs this way. Premier Bill Bennett must think he's only streamlining things with Bill 59. By that token, too, the legislature must be a tiresome inconvenience to the government which only slows the progress of the action-oriented doers in the cabinet.

Those in the cabinet — ex-Liberals too — should go back and re-read some of their old speeches and election campaign literature. Listen to the critics on this one and amend Bill 59. The first part of it is bad law.

No Golfing in Parks

Few projects could be sillier than the one before the Capital Regional Board to slice off 153 acres from the east side of Beaver Lake Park to build an 18-hole golf course. The board is sensibly doubtful about the proposal but has asked the Vancouver golf architect to produce more financial information. Much of the land in question lies west of the Pat Bay Highway, from the park entrance road off Elk Lake Drive north to a beach on the lake itself, opposite Piedmont. It is currently open fields and woods used for riding, hiking and a soccer field.

Certainly, a need exists for municipal golf courses in this area of moderate climate and a large retired population. At present there are 13 golf courses, four of them private with relatively high fees. But changing a multi-use park into a single-use golf course is not in the best interests of the public. In the burgeoning capital regional area there already is an inadequate ratio of parks to people. Must we slice nearly a quarter section off a nearby park in order to satisfy a minority demand?

The answer must be an unequivocal "no." Capital Regional Board should turn down the application without hesitation. At the same time some thought might be given by the board to alternative sites. Golf courses create green belts, preserve land and provide a valuable recreational outlet — as long as they don't impinge upon public parks.

RICHARD GWYN

It Should Have Been Open

OTTAWA — The role of the priest in society, or one of his roles at least, is to be a counterweight to the king. He does this by establishing a centre of moral and intellectual authority independent from the political power of the state. The king, though, always is far stronger than the priest. Therefore, the priest can function best if he is ruled by two kings and can play them off against each other.

The argument is a trifle obscure, though it may become a bit clearer if you substitute, as was intended, a university for "the priest" and the federal and provincial governments for "the two kings." It's a sample of what you missed because this week's conference of federal and provincial ministers was held behind closed doors. (Only Ontario and Nova Scotia argued that it should be open.)

Like all journalists, I am an ardent advocate of public conferences where, as ex-Newfoundland premier Joey Smallwood once put it, "open conspiracies can be openly arrived at."

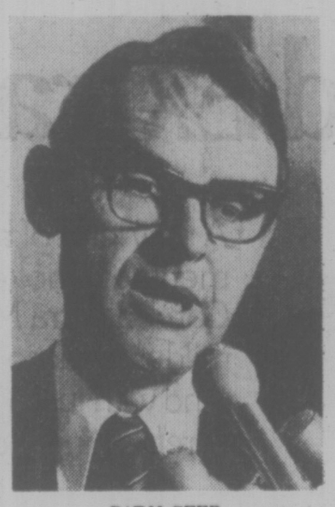
This attitude by reporters at times is a bit of a kneejerk reaction. Decision-making isn't always done best if the public is looking over the shoulders of those trying to figure out what to do.

TV No Impediment

The federal-provincial meeting, though, fits the rule rather than the exception. Television cameras wouldn't have impeded decision-making because no decisions were being made. The eleven principals plus their supporters were advancing their self-interests, manoeuvring for political advantage, posturing, dipsy-doodling, faking it, but also at times engaging in short flights of oratorical fancy and in short outbursts of unselfish concern about the country and about how best it can be governed.

Had those televison cameras been present, millions of Canadians, instead of just the 300 or so politicians and officials collected in Ottawa's conference centre, would have been able to witness the high-stepping intellectual debate about kings and priests that pitted British Columbia Education Minister Pat McGeer against Prime Minister Trudeau.

McGeer, who is a doctor of philosophy as well as of medicine, argued that universities, or priests, should be entirely independent of government so that they could fulfil their role of criticizing governments. Trudeau, himself a former university professor, replied that governments had a duty to ensure that universities served the needs of society. "Interference," said Trudeau, "is the name of the political game." The independence of the universities would be protected if "two kings" — Ottawa and the provinces — were involved in defining how they should serve society.



PAT McGEER

Other debates were more mundane, but more important. A whole day was spent trying to resolve the unresolvable Canadian dilemma — how, that is, to balance the particular needs of each region against the general needs of the country as a whole.

Ottawa proposed a quite ingenious scheme. It will give provinces the tax room, and the authority, to run "mature" national programs like hospital insurance and medicare entirely as each province wishes. Because now well-established, these programs aren't likely to differ much in the future from one province to another. Further, to bolster the resources of the poorer provinces, Ottawa will continue to fund part of the costs in hard cash.

It's a shame Canadians didn't have the chance to watch the complacent grins of the fat-cat provinces—Alberta, British Columbia, and less blatantly so, Ontario—which all have the revenue to run these schemes without direct federal aid. Worth hearing also would have been the pleas of the hungry-mouse Atlantic provinces who fear that without Ottawa's continued involvement their social services will fall even further behind.

The real shame is that viewers missed a flash of idealism. Saskatchewan these days is one of the richest of the provinces. Yet Premier Alan Blakeney argued eloquently against a federal pullback. It would widen the gap between rich and poor, said Blakeney, "and undo 15 years of share-cost programs."

They Meant It!

Lastly, Canadians missed seeing the look of horror on the faces of the premiers when they realized that by restraint, Ottawa actually means restraint. They had good reasons to complain about Ottawa's unilateral decision to lop $750 million off the share of income taxes owed the provinces. But most premiers (Ontario was a notable exception) were almost as vociferous in protesting the mild restraint, equivalent to about the growth rate of the gross national product, that Ottawa proposed for hospital insurance, medicare and post-secondary education.

The next conference will bring the 11 finance ministers to Ottawa in mid-July. It shouldn't be televised. Hard decisions have to be taken about how to divvy up the tax pie. Anyway, financial gnomes never indulge in outbursts of idealism, nor in fancy debates about kings and priests. There will be plenty of manoeuvring and dipsy-doodling mind you, but about statistics and computer-based projections that no one who isn't himself a gnome could understand.

Procedural Matter

Because of my absence from Victoria on June 11 I did not see your editorial (What's B.C.'s Policy?) of that date until June 15. Please allow me to correct the misapprehension contained therein.

You state, in part, "we have the deputy attorney-general arguing before the supreme court of Canada, which is hearing a constitutional challenge to the anti-inflation legislation, that B.C. feels there was no emergency when Ottawa established wage and price controls." This is completely in error.

The position that B.C. took at this hearing was that Ottawa was entitled to legislate in the private sector, if it showed that inflation amounted to a "national emergency." B.C. further took the position that a national emergency did exist, but that as a matter of procedure, the onus was upon Ottawa to establish this. Bearing in mind that British Columbia was an intervenor and not one of the basic parties to the referral, this is obviously the most appropriate position to take.

The deputy attorney-general, when asked by the court as to whether or not in his view Ottawa had established that a national emergency existed, he replied in the negative. As counsel appearing before any court, he is required to give an honest answer to a question from the bench. In short, Mr. Vickers did not say that inflation was not a matter of national emergency. He merely said that as a matter of court procedure, the government of Canada had not proved such to be the case in a satisfactory manner.

In conclusion, British Columbia's position, almost certainly since this government took office, has always been that a national emergency did exist and that it was this fact and this fact alone which gave Ottawa the constitutional right to legislate. — K. Rafe Mair, Minister of Consumer Services

Finish Facade

Will you kindly let me use a little space of your valuable paper? Regarding this apartment building (View Towers) on 1147 Quadra Street.

Some people like to call it the most criticized building. They perhaps should be forgiven for it is not the building but the outside which is not finished because four years ago the so-called City Fathers didn't want to issue the permit. Let's hope that this time the present administration at the city hall has the sense to realize that in this place there are more than 400 low-income tenants and almost every day they have requests for apartment accommodation. Let's hope that this time the owner gets the permit so to finish the work so we don't have to hear all the nonsense talk by people that have nothing else to do. — F. Paone, 1705—1147 Quadra Street.

Early Budget

I was most pleased to see Peter Bunn introduce a motion at the June 15 school board meeting to the effect that the board immediately get to work on the budget for the upcoming year, with a view to arriving at a maximum amount of money under which the school system will have to operate.

Unfortunately the motion was never adopted because of the inclusion of the word "discuss" with the various unions the implication of adopting this fixed budget. This was unfortunate as the intent was well clear, the three unions involved in the school system would simply have been advised that the budget when set would contain a certain amount of money for their salaries. If during wage negotiations this amount were to be exceeded due to a greater than arrived at earlier salary, then of course those involved would get that amount but there would be less of them, as layoffs would occur.

This motion has been put off to a special budget meeting chairman Bill Ross is intending to call. I hope that this motion receives serious consideration and will be adopted at that meeting.

I also hope that this will be an open meeting so that the public, who pay the bills, will be able to see how their money is to be managed.— Peter Yorke, 1187 Hewlett Place.

Crystal Pool

Canadians spend thousands of dollars watching professional athletes display their prowess. We yell and urge them on to greater effort, and readily boo them for any faux pas. But our own lack of physical conditioning has been roundly criticized, with disparaging comparisons drawn between Swedish citizens and ourselves.

Our governments urge us to join physical fitness groups; to get out and jog, run or bicycle to keep in shape. Hospital and medical costs are soaring out of sight. Could this be partly blamed on our lack of physical conditioning?

Victoria was given an Olympic-size swimming pool by a very generous donor. The pool is equipped with spring boards and diving tower; a paddling pool is annexed to the main floor. The city hires competent life guards for the public safety. What is happening to this wonderful facility?

Because of a decline in the revenue collected at the doors, the lack of profit, the city fathers are cutting back the hours of use. You cannot buy health. Our generous sponsor was aware of that fact.

We have one of the best facilities available, gratis. We have competent instructors in the life guards employed at the pool. What is needed is a vigorous program to increase the use of Crystal Pool. He who learns to swim and dive, will have excellent health all his life. — Woody Max, Victoria.

General Quang

I note that the Chilean refugee family will be leaving for Spain on June 28 after they were granted a stay in Canada until the end of the school year as they had two children of school age. However, the family was warned that if they had not left Canada after the end of the school year they would be deported to their native Chile where they would face persecution and torture just because they had supported the legally elected government of their country which was overthrown by a military clique.

In this case Mr. Andras, our minister of immigration, had no qualms about returning this family to certain persecution but our friend Gen. Quang of Vietnam fame still remains in Canada because no country will accept him including the U.S. and Mr. Andras is fearful of what will happen to him if he is returned to Vietnam. However, Mr. Andras had no such qualms about returning the Lieva family to Chile. Of course Gen. Quang is a very wealthy man and owns considerable property in Montreal. That apparently is the difference.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill Road.

Crocodile Tears

After reading the letter written to the editor by Mr. Fyfe, chairman executive, Hospital Employees Union, Local 180, I could just picture the crocodile tears falling, and the grief he must be suffering because the patients at Gorge Road Hospital may lose the high calibre of hospital care to which they are entitled.

I wonder if this grief he is expressing is not because he is losing some of his faithful followers. From my past recollection, this so-called high calibre of patient care is limited to just as long as the union can keep getting more money for less work. When this condition is not met their attitude is "to heck with the patient," and off the job they go, as we witnessed just a short while back.

I don't think Mr. Fyfe is going to get much sympathy from the public at this time. Perhaps he would do better spending his time improving some of the union members' work habits than in writing letters about his troubles — Richard H. Meadows, Victoria.

Strike Rights

Re the right to strike: the workers right to strike is on a par with the people's right to vote, protest and petition. Therefore any expression or action to take away one is the same as expression or action to take away the other. I'm sure most people would protest any expression to take their vote and protest right away and many would fight against any action to take them away.

I don't find it difficult to understand the objection of the plutocrat minority to the workers right to strike, for that right endangers the control they have of the world's natural resources, the means of exploiting them and the vast majority of the populace.

Any ruling power which takes away the workers' right to strike, will also if it is found necessary to protect the profits of multinational corporations take away the people's right to vote and protest. Then the fascist-minded plutocrats will be in full power and their greedy aspirations for greatness, power and profits can only be satisfied by cajoling and forcing the people into war.

The massive increase in profits are the cause of inflation, not the wages of the working people who are trying to gain the means to acquire good homes, good food and living for their families. So down with the Anti-Inflation Board and all fascist-like legislation.

More power to the United Nations, Habitat and the Stockholm Peace Conference. — D. Frankham, 209 — 710 Vancouver Street.

General Strike

I cannot understand how the New Democratic Party and their leader Dave Barrett could at their convention support a general strike this coming fall.

Surely we have had enough of strikes, study sessions, slowdowns and work to rule, without a party that calls itself democratic, supporting a general strike against the people of British Columbia.—Richard Brown, Cobble Hill.

South America: A Continent 'Stabilized' by Murder

By RICHARD GOTT
Manchester Guardian

The asassinations of leading Latin-American nationalist officers and politicians in the last three years have become so munerous that there is a growing feeling among observers of the continent's politics that something akin to "Operation Phoenix" is now under way.

Operation Phoenix was a CIA-funded assassination program organized during the Vietman war, designed to eliminate the Vietcong leaders. During the years the program was in operation many thousands of middle-level and upper-level Vietcong were murdered by the police of the Saigon regime — with training and technical assistance from the Americans.

In Latin America the violence seems, on the face of it, to be more indiscriminate. Every day brings news of political murder, assassination, torture and detention — particularly from the southern countries of Chile, Argentina and Uruguay. Almost everywhere, U.S.-supported military regimes are in full control, backed not by the tacit support of the population (as ingenious generals claim), but by their ability to handle guns and to sow a sophisticated system of terror.

In country after country, independent radical voices urging change have been silenced. The universities have virtually become free-fire zones. Innumerable politicians, academics, journalists, trade union leaders, teachers — the accumulated intellectual wealth of the continent — have been cast into exile by the prevailing climate of uncontrolled violence. They leave behind an army, not of improvement or modernisation, but an army — based on the long tradition of colonial rule — of occupation.

The alarming aspect of the situation, which is giving conspiracy theorists ample scope to practice their art, is that leading "moderates," men with the capacity to inspire and unite the nation in a campaign to resist the occupying forces are being picked off one by one.

The latest victim in a long list of political assassinations in Latin America since the current wave of counter-revolution swept across the continent in the wake of the downfall of Salvador Allende in September 1973 is General Juan Jose Torres, President of Bolivia in 1970-71. He disappeared from his home in Buenos Aires one day this month and his body was found the following day. General Torres tried to bring reform to Bolivia, giving workers and peasants a chance to express their views, but he was overthrown in a bloody coup, supported by Brazil.

His successor, General Banzer, is still in power. General Torres was one of the few men who might have been capable of forging an alliance to overthrow him. Another figure who might have had a role in a new nationalist Bolivia was General Zenteno Anaya. He was assassinated in Paris last month.

Zenteno's assassins also claimed that they had killed Colonel Ramon Trabal, the former head of Urguayan military intelligence. Trabal was murdered in Paris in December, 1974. He told me shortly before that he supported the left-wing military revolution in Portugal and would like to see something similar happen in Uruguay.

Given the present climate, it is hardly surprising that Chilean exiles should be worried about how far the hand of their secret police can reach, or that Latin American ambassadors in semi-exile in Europe should be employing more bodyguards, or that men like Wilson Ferreira, former Uruguayan presidential candidate, and Hector Campora, former president of Argentina, should have sought asylum in foreign embassies in Buenos Aires.

But who is really responsible? Is it a plot or is it mere coincidence that the progressive nationalists who brought rays of hope to Latin America in the early 1970s are now in the sights of sinister gunmen?

The man who should know is Henry Kissinger, who flew into Santiago this month to attend the annual assembly of foreign ministers of the Organisation of American States. As he surveyed the Latin American scene from Pinochet's Chile, he might have been embarrassed, but he had good reason to be satisfied.

TORRES
. . . paid price

He set out some years ago to "stabilize" the continent. Defeated in Asia, outmanoeuvred in Africa, it became necessary for the United States to pay more attention to its own backyard. The hatches have been battened down all over Latin America, and stability has been bought — at a price.

For years now the United States has been training Latin American policemen in terrorist tactics. At police academies in Washington and Texas they are taught the techniques of "counter-terror." For years these have beeen used in small unreported countries like Guatemala. It is hardly surprising that they should now be widely employed elsewhere.

Lang Fails to Deliver

By DOUGLAS FISHER

LANG . . . has the equipment

OTTAWA — Recently the House of Commons debated transportation for three hours. The speeches were easily, perhaps deservedly, forgettable.

Before Confederation, matters of transport — especially rail and canals — took up as much debating time in the parliament of the two Canadas as farming and land. They're still popular.

If brief, the discussion or contention on transportation issues never dies in this country. And transport, to Canadians, is a lot like ice-hockey. Each of us is an expert, at least in some phase or other of it.

MPs fit the pattern. Any one can and does fire into a debate on transportation with an intimate or cherished experience or opinion. Usually the MP has a bias towards his own region's transportation problems, rather than a national overview.

It's a rare MP who balances and relates the choices and varieties of transport — e.g., for people or goods; by road, rail, water and air; by publicly-owned and privately-owned corporations; or by the factors of energy costs, pollution, speed or the intensiveness of use of people and/or capital.

The debate was initiated by Jack Horner. The Alberta rancher, in a practical, catch-as-catch-can way, is the best informed, most experienced parliamentarian in the House on transportation. He is rarely theoretical and is much less ideological about transport policy than his reputation as a right-winger might suggest.

Horner questioned the "user pay" concept of the federal department of transport. Was it to be applied across the country and to all the modes of transport? What were the guidelines for introducing the policy?

The Albertan noted, though not sadistically or at length, the "balls-up" in transport that the Trudeau government had managed through electoral promises, task forces and ministerial hyperbole.

Neither Horner nor any other Opposition speaker really rubbed in the ridiculous or the boondoggling — e.g. Mirabel; Pickering; Terminal 2, Toronto; the St. Lawrence Seaway's financing; the Canadian Merchant Marine or lack of it; the dilemmas of the regional air carriers, including PWA, Alberta's own airline, etc., etc.

Otto Lang spoke for the government. He'll hold the ministerial job, barring heart attacks, until this government survives or disappears two years from now. He's had the ministry for nine months. That's long enough, given Lang's intelligence and industry, for us to deserve a bird's eye view of national transport policy — intentions and directions — on an occasion like this House debate.

The minister did not deliver. What is more exasperating, in reviewing his remarks, I could sense that this man has the grasp and the toughness to be an outstanding minister.

What's getting in his way?

It begins with his damnable partisanship and the brusque, humorless, dogmatic personality which any public performance brings forth.

Simply because of history, rich in excesses and failures in transport by Tory, Grit and NDP (Saskatchewan and Manitoba) governments, the politician of any party can, if he wants, have a partisan romp at the expense of the other guys.

Lang is both a sucker for such romps and extraordinarily self-righteous in response. For example, during the debate, he missed a chance to be candid about recent misadventures in federal transport activites and policy. Instead, he whitewashed. He defended the best of all possible transport administrations. Also, he was the regional expert. That is, he largely warped his arguments to and from Prairie transport issues. And they were arguments, not descriptions and explanations of federal plans and methods.

Lang almost ranted in favor of the "user pay" principle without any exposition of the part which competition, within and between modes, would or should play in fixing the fare or the rate.

The choices in transport policy and the capital spending needed to carry them out, are literally awe-inspiring, particularly the spending.

So we need a leader in transport with Lang's push and brains. Such a leader should also be somewhat avuncular and neutral, persuasive and patient, expository rather than argumentative. At this point, it isn't Otto Lang.

Private Police Forces Flourish

By BRIAN VALLEE
Toronto Star

The remarkable growth of the private security industry in Canada has reached the point where its manpower far outnumbers policemen and there may be as many private guards in uniform as there are members of the country's armed forces.

The boom in security protection has been caused by a corresponding boom in employee and consumer theft in all areas of the economy — retailing, service industries, manufacturing, wholesaling and transportation.

Protection companies estimate the pilferage bill for all of Canada at about $1.5 billion annually, including about $600 million at the retail level.

They estimate that losses through shoplifting and employee theft represent about 5 to 6 per cent of sales for discount stores; 2.5 per cent for department stores and 0.5 per cent for supermarkets.

The result has been the evolvement of the security business from the traditional night watchman to firms marketing sophisticated electronic equipment to help nab thieves, armies of uniformed security guards and the latest craze — watchdogs.

"We don't really know how many private security guards there are and maybe that's symptomatic of the problem," Maj.-Gen. Reg. Weeks, head of intelligence and security for the Department of National Defence, said in an interview.

By the end of 1974 the number of policemen, in all forces, had increased about 18 per cent to 48,500.

No official figures are available for the increase in private security forces since 1971 but police and security industry spokesmen interviewed agree the growth of private police has far outdistanced the growth of public police forces.

Using the police growth-rate figure of 18 per cent between 1971 and 1974, the figure for private security guards would be close to 60,000. But all indications are the growth of private security forces was much higher than 18 per cent over the three-year period.

In addition, the industry has continued to burgeon, in the 17 months since the end of 1974, to the point that it is quite conceivable the country now has more private security guards in uniform than the Canadian Forces which has 71,000 personnel.

As of April 1 this year, 100 licensed security guard companies were registered in Ontario alone. They had 11,600 employees. And the Ontario Provincial Police, which tries to keep close tabs on the industry, estimates another 12,000 unlicensed guards work in department stores and factories.

Add to that the 1,000 or so private security guards licensed to carry weapons in Ontario and the total comes close to 25,000. By comparison, the OPP has 4,000 men across the province and Metro's police force numbers about 6,000. The Ontario Police Association represents between 13,000 to 14,000 members in 109 local associations — including Metro — across the province.

Kelly LaBrash, president of the Ontario Association of Private Investigators and Security Guards, said that 15 to 20 private security companies were created in Metro alone in the last few months.

★ ★ ★

Pinkerton's of Canada Ltd. added 500 guards in 1975, bringing its total force to more than 3,000.

W. J. Sansom, who owns Fleet Investigation and Protection Co. in Toronto, says his company has grown by 200 per cent a year over the past three years.

Police agencies are not unduly concerned about the growth of these private armies because an extremely low percentage carry weapons (365 in Metro and about 1,000 across the province).

Those who are armed are registered and properly trained. Most of them work for agencies such as Brink's Canada Ltd. or at racetracks and other places where large amounts of cash or securities need protecting.

Weeks said the tendency by Canadian industries to build up their own private armies is dangerous.

"It's okay while these private armies are tightly controlled but they should augment the police, not replace them," he said.

Metro Police Chief Harold Adamson is on record in favor of tighter controls over the security industry but says the private forces are needed to deal with the great volume of crimes committed on private property.

Security guards can make a citizen's arrest but they have no special police powers and they are not allowed to use force or violence. When there is trouble guards are expected to call the police.

The main concerns among police agencies and criminologists are the police style uniforms worn by most security guards, ownership in the United States of some larger Canadian security companies and the lack of standards and training requirements for those hired as security guards.

An Ontario Task Force on Policing in 1974 recommended that these areas be studied. As a result, changes in security guard legislation are expected from the Solicitor-General's office before the year's end.

ETHICS NOT FOR US

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

That was a strange news story out of Regina the other day, reporting that the Canadian Managing Editors Conference had "refused to endorse a draft code of ethics" prepared by a committee of the editorial division of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association. Goodness gracious (I thought after reading that far), what is that nasty committee asking managing editors to do — lie and cheat and steal? Everybody knows how newspaper men hate that sort of thing!

However, I became mystified as I read on. One recommendation in the publishers' draft code was that "significant financial investments by the newspapers or its officers and employees should be disclosed." Why, of course! Isn't that a cornerstone notion of today's journalism? Without it, wouldn't dozens of investigative reporters be on welfare, or the pogey, instead of spending their lives ferreting out people who do not reveal conflicts of interest?

A cabinet minister for instance, who owns land in an area where development might be affected by a cabinet decision, is a dead duck unless he tells everybody, resigns from the cabinet, and goes into the desert for 40 days to eat wild berries.

But I must have missed some hitherto hidden truth that sets newspapers apart from their usual adversaries, because Ray Timson, deputy managing editor of The Toronto Star, objected to that applying to newspapers. It should be enough for a man to advise his management of such investments, he contended. It was left as an open question as to whom management, faced with the same dilemma, should report: Ann Landers? Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson? In a communication signed, Concerned Tycoon?

But then came a real crunch. This story from Regina stated that managing editor C. W. Davey of The Globe and Mail objected to a provision in the ethics code that would deny reporters the option to lie about who they were, when tracking down (as the saying goes) a story.

Why would he object? Because, he implied, some reporters find that it isn't exactly like administering a dose of truth serum when they announce they are reporters, and have a few questions they'd like to ask. In fact, he revealed that the Globe has a reporter who spends half his time posing as an insurance investigator.

It seems to me that the managing editors are just making things a lot tougher for the rest of us when they vote against being governed by certain standards of straightforwardness that their newspapers constantly urge upon others.

At the very least, couldn't they have barred the press from their meeting, so that the public wouldn't know?

The New Good Ol' Boy

russell baker

NEW YORK — At first I did not recognize Grimsby. He had undergone a radical change of clothing since our last meeting in Washington during the Kennedy Administration. In those days he always wore a dark three-button suit with narrow lapels and a hard nose, which was the uniform of the New Frontier. Now he was wearing a frayed straw hat, bare feet and overalls, and was carrying a fishing pole. On Park Avenue he looked so out of place that I would have passed by hurriedly — New York streets teem with maniacs, many of whom think they are Huckleberry Finn — had he not extended his hand and said, "Howdy, y'all."

It was Grimsby, all right. Despite the hayseed he was chewing, there was no mistaking the familiar lust for fancy office space and government limousine service which burned in those eyes.

Under Kennedy he had been one of the giants of the foreign-policy establishment, advising at all the great policy disasters. Washington sycophants had exhausted every cliche in the federal flattery lexicon to describe the hardness of his nose, the ferocity of his steel-trap mind, the unassailability of his powerful logic and the glacial power of his mighty Ivy League education. Now he was reduced to this.

I wept a small tear, which Grimsby quickly blotted with a bandanna. "Weep no more my noble son of the South," he declaimed, referring to my Virginia antecedents. "The time of the boll weevil has passed at last."

"Are you going fishing?" I asked.

"I am gettin' ready for the day of Jubilo," he said. 'There's a great day a-comin'. There's gonna be a gret new president up in Washington, and we're all gonna dance at the jubilee ball."

"Ah," I murmured, for it was becoming clear now. It had been 12 years since Grimsby had last enjoyed the federal payroll. He was looking for a job in Foggy Bottom, but preferably in the White House.

"The way I see it," said Grimsby, "this country needs a secretary of state who knows how to outsmart a catfish underneath the sweet perfume of the sycamore trees."

"Listen, Grimsby," I said, "if you're hoping to tie onto Jimmy Carter, you've got to learn that sycamore trees don't have any perfume. It's the magnolia trees that have perfume. Also, the catfish aren't found under the sycamore, the magnolia or even the cottonwood trees. The place where you outsmart the catfish is down by the creek, pronounced 'crick.' "

Grimsby signed. "I've got a lot to learn," he said. "You're handicapped by your brilliant Ivy League education," I told him.

★ ★ ★

"Let's talk about it over a heapin' plate of okra and fatback," Grimsby suggested. He was clearly desperate to escape from the campus backwaters and get back into power. "When you're dressed like that," I explained, "I couldn't be seen with you eating okra and fatback, or even a whole boiled alligator floating in a tub of hog grease, and neither would Jimmy Carter."

"Shucks," said Grimsby, "I'm just a good ole boy."

Now Grimsby is anything but a good old boy, as can be attested by a whole generation of his students in world affairs, all of whom he failed in order to hold down competition for the big foreign-policy jobs in Washington. "Give it up, Grimsby," I urged. "Let the word go forth from this time and place that the torch has passed to a new generation. Go back to your three-button suit. Put on some shoes. Write your memoirs."

Grimsby did not take this advice well. A little of the old hardness broke out on his nose and by the way he whipped his fishing pole through the air you could tell he would have outsmarted me like a catfish under the sycamore trees except for my powerful Southern antecedents.

"I'm sick and tired of having nothing but students to push around," he said. "I'm asking not what I can do for my country, but what my country can do for me."

One does not like to cross Grimsby. Those who tried it in the old days often found themselves being bombed for the preservation of world peace or dropped from the lists of those invited to eat canapes at state department receptions.

Fortunately, our walk had brought us to the offices of the Council on Foreign Relations, where Grimsby was to read a brilliant new position paper on country-ham exports to the Soviet bloc. As we parted, Grimsby waved his fishing pole at three women leaving the building and said, "Howdy, Ma'ams. I love you all." At which one of the women hit him with her purse and fled. No New Yorker has to look twice to recognize a mugger.

Boston Strike In Second Day

BOSTON (UPI) — An illegal strike by thousands of public employees went into its second day today, disrupting services at state institutions and some agencies.

State officials estimated nearly 20,000 employees walked out Monday — despite a 1974 law prohibiting strikes by state employees — to dramatize demands for increased pay.

Prisons and state hospitals were hardest hit along with welfare offices and the registry of motor vehicles by the first statewide employee strike in Massachusetts' history.

Silver Dollar Comeback for U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. government, its new $2 bill barely in circulation, is planning to issue a $1 coin designaged particularly with vending machines in mind, according to an industry leader.

The reason: Inflation.

A dollar doesn't buy much any more and there are even fewer things you can get for change.

"Such a coin is needed because of today's prices," says D. J. Barton, president of Roew International Division at Whippany, N.J. of Triangle Industries, Inc.

Barton said the vending people don't know yet how soon government officials hope to introduce the new $1 coin, but they do know it will be a "token" coin, containing only about 8 per cent silver, and probably will be a little smaller than the present half dollar so as to make it easy to modify vending machines to accept it.

The old silver dollar, often called "the cartwheel," originally was an intrinsic coin; that is it actually contained a dollar's worth of silver.

But it never was freely minted, so over the years the relationship between its silver content and the price of silver fluctuated.

It became unpopular early in the century because it was so heavy and the paper dollar was so much more convenient to handle.

"The vending price of cigarettes now is above 60 cents in most places, so a $1 coin would be ideal," Bardon said.

"It also would be useful for the machines that sell sandwiches and other items costing more than 50 cents and would enable machine operators to sell more readily those items costing more than a dollar."

Vending machine companies, of course, make and distribute currency changers for $1 and $5 bills. But it only pays to put these in locations where there are a number of vending machines.

"The currency changers work well; they're better at detecting counterfeit bills than the little detectors bank tellers have," Barton said, but they do take a lot of servicing.

When and if the new coin appears, Barton said, it should give a boost to the vending machine business. He said editor Arthur Yohalem of the trade magazine Vending Times estimates sales of merchandise in vending machines will increase $1 billion to a $10 billion total this year anyway.

They suffered a big drop to $202 million in 1974 from $241 million in 1973, recovered some last year and are making a further recovery this year, Barton said. The data is from the federal census bureau.

Alaska Pipeline Welds Not Properly Checked

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — In their rush to complete the 800-mile Alaska oil pipeline, workmen failed to inspect, or let pass, at least 3,955 faulty welds that now must be rechecked at considerable cost and possible loss of time.

Delayed for years by litigation and slowness of Congress to give legislative approval, work on the pipeline began early last year and is expected to be put in operation by the middle of 1977.

It will then pump about two million barrels of oil a day — slightly more than 10 per cent of U.S. needs — from the north down to Valdez where it will be loaded on tankers and shipped to the West Coast.

Construction involved welding together 80-foot long lengths of 48-inch pipe and then burying them under permafrost and steams or elevating them above ground.

Alyeska, the consortium formed to build the 800-mile pipeline, released a survey last May showing that 3,955 welds joining 80-foot sections of pipe were either improperly done, or were approved in an inspection using phoney x-rays.

Alyeska told a hearing Monday of the House of Representatives energy and power subcommittee that of an estimated 2,000 welds remaining to be fixed, 916 were not easily accessible for repair or inspection.

Peter Kelley, the x-ray technician whose law suit last September made public the welding scandal, said he was told by his supervisors to falsify inspection pictures.

Kelley said the point of the false records apparently was to enable his firm, Ketchbaw Industries, to keep pace with the welders. Once the x-rays were taken, and the welds judged satisfactory, the line could be buried.

Kelley said he falsified the pictures and was told to keep quiet when he questioned the practice. When he was found to be keeping records, he was fired, he said. He also said his life was threatened.

The agreement between the federal government and Alyeska requires x-rays of every weld, but now Alyeska is considering testing the quality of the buried welds by acoustic techniques.

To test the welds acoustically — with instruments operating inside the 48-inch-diameter line — the federal government would have to waive the requirement for x-ray inspection.

Pony Express Ambush Set

EVERETT, Wash. (UPI) — Cutting off a wagon train didn't get the Indians what they wanted, so a representative of the Stillaguamish tribe announced plans to raid the pony express.

One year ago Frank Allen and other representatives of the Stillaguamish tribe cut off the Bicentennial Wagon Train on its trip from Blaine, Wash., to Valley Forge, Pa., at Island Crossing in northern Snohomish county.

The Indian effort did not accomplish its main goal: Official recognition of claim to traditional tribal lands.

So Allen said members of the tribe would stop the pony express today. The "Pony Express '76" leaves the Skagit County fairgrounds in Mount Vernon today, bound for Valley Forge.

Swine Flu Shots Fail on Children

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sample swine flu vaccines passed tests in adults, but flunked them in children, government sponsored studies showed Monday.

The tests on 4,000 adults showed all four manufacturers have vaccines that will provide protection against a possible swine flu epidemic next winter with few side effects.

Two per cent of the adults who received doses likely to be used in actual immunization programs suffered fevers greater than 102 degrees.

The vaccines are being made to fulfill President Ford's $135 million program to immunize all Americans older than 12.

Tests on 1,200 cridren, known to be a problem age for flu immunization, failed to find vaccine doses that provide protection without too many side effects.

More tests will be scheduled, including studies on the possibility of giving children a two-injection series, usually considered unsatisfactory in mass programs because of the problem of getting children to the doctor twice.

Advisory committee to the U.S. Public Health Service agencies who will set the rules for the national immunization program — largest attempt the U.S. has ever made to provide protection against a possible epidemic — will meet today at the National Institutes of Health to go over the data from the flu vaccine tests.

Their recommendations to the PHS are expected later this week.

The swine flu virus, isolated last February among recruits at Ft. Dix, N.J., is similar to the virus that caused the great flu epidemic of 1918, which killed 20 million people around the world — 500,000 in the U.S.

The results of the nationwide trials, at least as far as the adults are concerned, provided answers to critics who charged side effects from the vaccine would be as high as 15 per cent.

He'll Climb Any Mountain, Cross Any Floe!

By RICHARD HALLORAN
Times News Services

TOKYO — Naomi Uemura has climbed to the top of the highest mountain on each of five continents, has floated down the length of the Amazon on a balsa raft and has just returned from the longest recorded dogsled trek, from Greenland across northern Canada to Alaska.

Uemura whips dogs across barren Arctic ice floes

Among the future plans of the 35-year-old Japanese are dogsled journeys from Canada across the ice cap to the North Pole and another across northern Siberia from the Bering Strait to Norway to complete his overland circuit of the Arctic Ocean.

But the real dream of this somewhat shy, seemingly uncomplicated man is to cross the 1,800 miles of trackless waste on the uninhabited Antarctic continent alone on a dogsled.

"When I concentrated all the ability I had, I could climb those mountains," Uemura, a wiry man standing 5 feet 4 inches said quietly.

"If I concentrate all my ability again, I think I can do it in the Arctic."

He emphasized that those plans are just ideas, not projects to which he is committed.

"I have never said that I would do any of them," he said. "The difference is important to me. Once I have said something, then I have to do it."

Uemura is an adventurer, not an explorer, but he is a man who knows what he wants.

"These expeditions might have no social value in themselves," he explained, "but there is something that drives me to do them."

Uemura, his cheeks still splotched with brown from the exposure of his 18 months in the North, has little bravado.

He said: "I don't take chances. When I say I will do it, then I have to be sure I will succeed."

Born and brought up in Hyogo, in Central Japan, he started climbing mountains when he entered Meiji University here in 1960.

He joined the university's mountain-climbing club, mostly to escape city life in Tokyo.

Rather sheepishly he said: "I spent at least a hundred days a year in the mountains. I rarely attended classes, but somwhow I managed to graduate."

He climbed in the Himalayas with a Japanese team in 1965.

The next year he climbed the 15,780-foot Mont Blanc in France, Europe's highest, and the 14,780-foot Matterhorn in Switzerland. He also took on the 19,319-foot Kilimanjaro, Africa's highest, and Mount Kenya, 17,000 feet.

Then he went to Argentina to climb Aconcagua volcano, South America's tallest peak at 23,000 feet.

After that came the two-month, 3,750-mile float down the Amazon, the world's second longest river.

From April 1969 to May, 1970, Uemura was with a Japanese expedition to Mount Everest in Nepal, the world's highest peak which exceeds 29,000 feet.

"On May 11 that year," he said simply, "I stood on the top of Mount Everest."

That marked another turning point for Uemura.

Since then he has been able to get sponsors, usually Mainichi Shimbun, a leading daily newspaper, or Bungei Shunju, a prestigious monthly magazine.

Three months after climbing Mount Everest, Uemura took one week to climb the 20,300-foot Mount McKinley in Alaska, North America's highest.

In that climb, as in most of his assaults on the mountains except Everest, Uemura was alone.

That is a most un-Japanese trait; the Japanese are among the world's best at teamwork and are far more comfortable working in a group than as individuals.

"I'm sorry," Uemura said, in this apologetic case being quite Japanese.

"But I haven't felt that way for a long time, that things are better in a group. I've felt that independent action is much better.

"If you do something alone, there is much more satisfaction."

Girl, 4, Drowns In Reservoir

HORNBY ISLAND — A four-year-old girl reported missing Sunday night was found here Monday, drowned in a man-made reservoir.

Stephen Pacheco told RCMP his daughter Fawn had wandered off while the family attended a community picnic nearby.

An RCMP diver, assisted by a civilian search party located the girl's body while conducting a search-by-feel exploration of an earth-lined pond.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

SAANICH ASKS PAY ADVICE

On Monday the council voted to ask the executive committee of the Union of B.C. Municipalities ot study the problem.

Saanich wants the whole problem aired at the UBCM's general convention.

Monday's action came after Alf. Sandy Noel said, "We've been subject to a lot of adverse criticism. The senior government (provincial) should lay down parameters on how council wages should be scaled."

Council was severely reprimanded by many residents this year when members voted themselves another increase after having received a 12 per cent increase in December.

Duplex Clamps Begin

Saanich council decided Monday to stop the use of one of the municipality's many illegal suites but ruefully admitted it lacks legislation to solve the over-all problem.

Council refused the application of Surain Singh, 3226 Alder, to have his home rezoned as a duplex. Singh rents part of the house to relatives.

He was told earlier this year by municipal officials that the rental violated the zoning bylaw and the fire marshal act. It was then that Singh asked for the rezoning.

In a report, municipal planner Gil Laurenson told council the illegal suite had first been brought to his department's attention in 1972.

The property had been sold since then, Laurenson said.

Mayor Ed Lum agreed with Ald. Fred Severson that illegal suites were "all over the municipality."

"We've been wrestling with this as long as I've been on council," Lum said. "We're basements. They build them swamped with illegal suites in for in-laws, then sell and move on."

Down-to-earth activities will include a pancake breakfast, salmon barbecue and a Saturday evening dance where there will be a special tribute to the carnival's grand marshall, Dr. H. J. (Jack) Pickup, former mayor of Alert Bay.

Couldn't Handle Holocaust Firefighters Say

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Burning gasoline spilled into the Inner Harbor from a ruptured fuel storage tank could create a holocaust Victoria firefighters would be powerless to contain, arbitration chairman John Davie was told Monday.

The statement by Local 730 president Ross Cameron, of International Association of Firefighters, came minutes before conclusion of evidence on the seventh day of an arbitration hearing into a 1976 contract with the city of Victoria.

Cameron was making general comments on the city's position citing the department as a superior firefighting force whose members are well-rewarded, but merit the maximum allowable wage increase under federal wage and price controls — or 7.3 and 7.1 per cent over two years.

The union seeks an 18 per cent wage increase in one year, or parity with the majority of firefighters in B.C., plus other contract improvements.

"If it sounds like sour apples, you are probably correct," Cameron told Davie. "But I get tired of hearing the same thing year after year — of how proud the city is of its firemen, etc. You can't eat compliments."

He said the only times firefighters were able to get improvements in their working contract was when the matter had gone to arbitration, which it had in all but one year of his 11 years associated with the union.

It took two years to get the city to agree to change the word "firemen" to "firefighters" in the contract, Cameron said.

And if firefighters are well-rewarded for their services, then 85 per cent of firemen in B.C. are better rewarded, he declared.

It was true there are no significant slum areas to present a firefighting hazard to firemen — in fact there are no slums in the city, he went on. But three-quarters of the city's area is covered with older, two and three-storey wood frame housing.

The city had said there is not a large number of tall buildings nor large industrial area for firefighters to contend with, but Cameron said the fire department has no equipment to fight fires from the exterior of buildings over seven storeys. Anything higher was fought by sheer manpower.

"If you've ever tried hauling hose up 13 flights with a 65-pound pack (hose and fittings), a 30-pound Scott air bottle and full equipment (coat, boots, belt and helmet), it can be tricky."

Vancouver has eight times the manpower of the 104-man Victoria force to draw on in case of major fires, while Victoria has a mutual aid pact with surrounding municipalities.

Mutual aid, said Cameron, "is not all it's cracked up to be."

Nine million gallons of gasoline are stored in tanks on the Inner Harbor, and in the event of accident, 1,000 gallons could easily escape before the flow would be cut off, Cameron said.

A five-knot tide could carry the burning fuel towards wharves and buildings while the fire department would not have the men and equipment to cope. He said the few tugs operated by Seaspan International which have fire nozzles are insufficiently-equipped as well.

Replying to a city proposal for the removal of probationary firefighters from grievance protection, Cameron said this was a "ridiculous clause." He feared such a provision would be misused to permit discrimination against new men.

The chairman commented later that he, too, was opposed to such a provision. Through his experience with labor relations he had formed the opinion "every employee should have the right to grievance procedure I'm just letting you know that's my outlook," Davie said.

Cameron said a city proposal to reduce the number of paid industrial first aid certificate holders in the department from eight to five would make it "literally impossible to run the department."

Workers' Compensation rules require one man for each shift, and the additional four are needed as backup in case of illness; and to cover on days off.

Deputy chief Carl Coates was asked by Davie how the proposal would affect efficiency of the department:

"There would be times when a first aider couldn't be on shift," Coates replied.

"Perhaps you could discuss this with the chief. We don't want to impair the efficiency of the department," Davie said.

Carl Anselm, the city's bargainer, said there is provision in the contract for another man to fill in at the higher-rated job.

Earlier testimony by UBC economist Dr. Emil Bjarnson was clarified. The witness said he did not recall using the expression "B.C. consumer price index" in referring to a higher rate of inflation here than elsewhere in Canada.

But he said the rate of CPI for Vancouver last year was "considerably higher" for Vancouver than in the country as a whole—11.6 vs. 8.9 per cent.

He said in the absence of a price index for any place in B.C. outside of Vancouver, the Vancouver index could be used to gain an approximate idea of price rises provincially, Bjarnson said.

If he had to choose between the Vancouver index and the national index when looking at Victoria cost of living, he would choose Vancouver, he said.

For this year, he said, economists are predicting about 6 per cent increase in national productivity — "a good step" toward restoring the post-war trend. "It must get there, or we're in trouble," he said.

In the past decade firemen had shared in productivity and for the past 11 years had experienced 46.6 per cent increase in real wages, compared with 44 per cent for employees in the manufacturing industry, the witness said.

Asking his opinion on whether federal anti-inflation guidelines had been effective in helping the economy recover, Bjarnson said there is no agreement among economists, although about two-thirds believe controls had had a negative effect.

It is the city's position that anti-inflation controls should be observed in reaching a settlement, while the union contends firefighters need to catch up by at least $33 a month for first class positions.

Final argument by the sides awaits completion of the transcript of evidence, making the next sitting likely for early July.

Imperial Challenging the Royal

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The Royal Bank of Canada has long been number one in the country but it is now facing a serious challenge from the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Statistics released today by the banks show assets of the Commerce grew 21.4 per cent during the 12 months preceeding April 30, compared to the Royal's growth rate of 14.9 per cent.

This reduced the Royal's lead from $2.97 billion a year ago to $2.11 billion as of April 30 this year.

If the growth rate of the two companies remains constant, the Commerce would be only $1 billion behind in 1977 and would overtake the Royal in 1978.

Total assets of the Royal this year are $26.6 billion, up from $23.1 billion.

In third place is the Bank of Montreal with assets of $19.7 billion, up 6.5 per cent from $18.5 billion.

Fourth is Bank of Nova Scotia with assets of $16.8, up 11.4 per cent from $15.1 billion.

Fifth is Toronto-Dominion Bank, at $15.6 billion, up 18.3 per cent from $13.2 billion.

Largest gain among Canada's five small banks was the 79.4 per cent increase in assets achieved by Mercantile Bank.

However, Bank Canadian National remains the largest of the five minor systems with assets of $5.2 billion, up 18.8 per cent from $4.4 billion.

Provincial Bank of Canada is second among the minors (seventh among the 10 banking chains) with $3.3 billion, up 21.3 per cent from $2.7 billion.

Mercantile is third at $1.5 billion, up from $847 million.

Bank of British Columbia ranks fourth among the minors (ninth overall) with assets of $731 million, up 35.2 per cent from $540 million.

Smallest of the 10 is Unity Bank of Canada with assets of $173 million, up 14 per cent from $151 million.

Total assets of the 10 banks is $114.4 billion, up 15.6 per cent from $99 billion a year earlier.

In competition with the trust companies and credit unions, the banks remain far ahead, although their percentage growth rate is slightly less.

From 1967 to 1974, bank assets increased at an average annual rate of 15.5 per cent (almost identical to the growth of 15.6 per cent from 1975 to 1976) while the trust companies grew at an annual average rate of 16.2 per cent and credit unions by 17 per cent.

Largest of the trust companies is Royal Trust (no connection with the Royal Bank) with assets of $15.1 billion as of the beginning of this year.

Assets of all credit unions and caisses populaires combined equal only $12 billion, with the largest being the Federation de Quebec des Caisses Populaires with assets of $5.2 billion.

NUMBER OF LOANS DOWN IN B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The number of loans made in British Columbia by the Federal Business Development Bank so far this year is down from 1975 while other areas of Canada show an increase, Richard Murray, president of the bank, said.

Murray told a news conference the number of loans in B.C. is down about 10 to 12 per cednt (although the dollar value is up) compared with an increase in number of loans of 19 per cent on the Prairies, 17 per cent in Ontario and 20 per cent in Quebec.

Regional manager John Millard said that up to December, 1974 12 per cent of the loans were in arrears but in 1975 this rate increased by 50 per cent, a reflection of the B.C. economy. The rate is starting to drop now.

In the fiscal year ended last Sept. 30, loans by the bank in B.C. totalled $132 million or 33 per cent of the $401 million loaned during the year.

The bank now has 14 offices in B.C. and will open four more this year in Vancouver, Langley, Vernon and Williams Lake.

Alberta Oil 'Nest-Egg' Difficult to Hatch

EDMONTON (CP) — There are an estimated 900 billion barrels of oil in Alberta's oil sands; a neat energy nest-egg for a country rapidly devouring its more accessible conventional petroleum supply.

But getting at the nest-egg is proving more of a problem that had been anticipated. Pessimism has replaced optimism as companies have put plans for oil-sands development into mothballs.

"In the light of present economic conditions it's quite within the realm of possibility that new oil-sands mining projects could falter," Kenneth Heddon, president of Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., (GCOS) told a shareholders meeting.

GCOS has been operating the only commercial plant in the oil sands since 1968 and has lost more than $79 million in the process.

A second plant is being constructed at a cost of more than $2 billion by Syncrude Canada Ltd.

But soaring costs have prompted Shell Canada Ltd. of Toronto, Petrofina Canada Ltd. of Montreal and Home Oil Ltd. of Calgary to delay oil-sands projects.

The federal government, in a report on energy tabled in the Commons April 27, was gloomy about oil-sands development.

"It is clear that, barring major technological advances, future oil-sands plants would appear to be only marginally attractive at current international oil prices, even with the special fiscal concessions that have been made in the case of the Syndrude project," the report said.

The concessions became necessary when Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd., one of the original Syncrude partners, withdrew from the project in late 1974. The federal, Alberta and Ontario governments took up 15-, 10- and five-per-cent interests to save the project.

William Richards, president of Dome Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary, said:

"I doubt that the country could stand the political and economic trauma associated with the salvaging of an oil-sands project every two years."

Shell Canada appears to be next in line to build an oil-sands plant but says financing is a major hurdle. Shell estimates the next plant will cost about $3 billion and says it cannot be financed by a single company. Participation by other companies, the financial community and governments, along with a reasonable tax situation and satisfactory commercial terms are essential.

Frank Spragins, Syncrude chairman, said inflation "has thrown confusion, pessimism and despair into the planners of future energy projects."

Mr. Richards said provincial and federal taxes have drastically reduced Home's ability to invest in oil sands and other heavy-oil deposits.

"Home has no choice but to sit back and take a wait-and-see attitude."

The four major oil-sands deposits in Alberta cover an area of more than 10.8 million acres in the Peace River, Cold Lake, Lake Wabasca and Athabasca regions.

Dankoe

Dankoe Mines Ltd. of Vancouver reports 1975 profit before extraordinary items of $226,001 or 11 cents per share compared wiith a loss of $40,753 or two cents per share the previous year. Domtar

Domtar Ltd. has cut its quarterly dividend to 20 cents from 40 cents due to reduced earnings in the first quarter of this year and because of general economic conditions. tions, which affect all major commercial flights.

But pilots were advised to assess the situation on an individual basis "because we don't want to put out a directive that would result in a contempt-of-court citation."

Treasury Board president Jean Chretien said earlier Monday that the government would file applications with the federal court against all controllers who booked off sick.

"I don't buy that crazy jazz that they suddenly got sick on Monday morning when they had a court injunction," he said. "Everyone who was out will be prosecuted."

The pilots were ordered back to their jobs by a federal court injunction obtained by the airlines early Monday.

In Vancouver, 25 Air Canada flights in and out of the international airport were cancelled.

Some pilots showed up for work Monday, but then reported the situation was unsafe for flying, a spokesman said.

CP Air spokesman Reid Moir said the airline maintained international flights by busing passengers to Seattle.

Frank Gray of Air Canada said two flights came into Vancouver late Monday.

"One of the flights was with a French-Canadian crew and originated in Halifax, while the other was with an English crew from the Prairies. That's all we got in."

Controllers, who guide aircraft takeoffs and landings, returned to work Monday evening after the federal government started court action against controllers who walked off their jobs in Winnipeg Sunday despite a federal court order Saturday prohibiting a strike.

Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson of the Federal Court said Monday he will issue an order requiring 16 Winnipeg air traffic controllers to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for court for defying the injunction brought down Saturday.

The order was requested by federal government lawyer Andre Garneau, who said all Winnipeg controllers had seen copies of the injunction before they walked off their jobs.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Monday that the pilots and controllers "should cool it and do their jobs."

They should await the results of a special study on safety aspects of bilingual air traffic control, Trudeau said.

Expansion of bilingual air traffic control — now in effect under visual flight rule only at five Quebec airports — is several months away and will not be proceeded with until a special commission has reported.

The government has not yet found a replacement for Montreal lawyer John Keenan, who resigned as special inquiry commissioner earlier this month because of pressure from French MPs and francophone air traffic controllers, who are bitterly opposed to the position taken by the English-speaking leaders of CATCA.

There were suggestions that Keenan would be biased because he had previously acted on behalf of the pilots' association, which is opposed to expansion of bilingual air traffic control.

Anglophone leaders of the controllers' association say they are opposed to further use of French in air traffic control "strictly on safety grounds." French-speaking members of the union have accused association executives of racism.

Chretien, whose department is responsible for contract negotiations with the federally-employed controllers, said pilots and controllers openly ignored federal court injunctions "despite assurances already given that bilingual air traffic control will not be extended until proven safe.

"It is intolerable that the air industry be paralysed and the travelling public be gravely inconvenienced," he added.

At one point Monday morning, at least eight major airports were closed, leaving thousands of airline passengers stranded. The walkouts by pilots and controllers started Sunday.

Train companies and smaller airlines with pilots not represented by CALPA reported a heavy demand on their services.

ALCOHOLISM WORRIES FORCES

TORONTO (CP) — Alcoholism is a major problem of the Canadian Armed Forces, says Maj. John Harder, head of the defence ministry's drug and alcohol program.

He told delegates at an addiction conference Monday that men in uniform with drinking problems have six months to quit drinking or leave the armed forces.

"The real difficulty was in convincing senior officers that heavy drinking was no longer part of the armed forces' traditions."

He said drinking servicemen handling classified material were a security risk and those handling skilled jobs were "potential disasters."

Miner Tells Strike Woes

A union representative from the small mining community of Granisle began distributing information on the steps of the legislature Monday about the long labor dispute that is "turning the town into a ghost town."

Mohan Kang was sent to Victoria by his union — Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers — to try to spread word of the strike that has been going on against Noranda's Bell Copper Mine since Feb. 7.

Kang is distributing a pamphlet outlining the union's position and asking for support from "all trade unionists and concerned citizens."

The leaflet claims a neighboring mine in the community — Granby's Granisle Copper Mine — is paying more than 50 cents an hour more than the latest offer by Noranda.

"The Bell miners are not on strike to gain the highest rates in B.C.," the pamphlet says, "They are on strike so that they won't be the lowest paid miners in B.C."

Kang said he has met leader of the opposition Dave Barrett who told him he will do his best, but who also told him he is not the government, Kang said.

He is also trying to get a meeting with Bill King, former labor minister in the NDP government.

The area's MLA, Jack Kampf (Social Credit, Omineca), has promised to look into the matter, Kang said.

Labor Minister Allan Williams has been requested by the union to intervene. "But the feeling in Granisle is that the town will go bust because the government isn't interested," Kang said. Only 30 of the mine's 175 workers are still in Granisle.

Kang said he did not know how long he would keep up his vigil in front of the legislature.

SPORTING HAUL

Thieves broke into Ray's Sporting Goods at Colwood Corners over the weekend and made off with enough sports equipment to start a small business of their own, Colwood RCMP said today.

Missing were Wilson and Head tennis rackets, skate boards, frisbees, running shoes, rugby shorts, badminton racquets, a dozen softballs, a camp stove, eggholders, a couple of baseball gloves and some change that had been left in the till.

Police said the loss totalled about $800.

Fire Probe

The results of an investigation into a fire that destroyed the Tsartlip Indian school Saturday are not expected to be known until later this week, Sidney RCMP said today.

A spokesman said a provincial fire marshal spent Monday at the scene of the fire and has taken samples back to Vancouver for laboratory testing.

Jobs Scarce

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's unemplomnent picture has worsened, with government figures highlighting the scarcity of jobs available for young people leaving school.

Total unemployment on June 10, when the last count was taken, was 1,332,605, which represents 5.7 per cent of the normal working population and is an increase of 60,775 since May.

The number of jobless was swollen by 122,905 graduates who have registered for unemployment payments, an increase of 85,154 over the preceding month. Job vacancies reported to the unemployment department where only 28,266.

After adjustment for seasonal factors, the June unemployed total was 1,256,500 or 5.4 per cent, an increase over May of 6,500 and the third successive rise in this figure.

Thetis Lake Park Drunk Charges Laid

Charges of causing a disturbance by being drunk in Thetis Lake Park were read Monday in Victoria provincial court against William Robert Alexander, 22, of 2273 Bellamy and Robert Bruce Rosin, 23, of 436 Owens. Both pleaded not guilty and were released by Judge William Ostler on undertaking to return for their trials.

The charges arose from an incident Sunday in which Colwood RCMP were called to the park at about 2:45 p.m. when lifeguards reported 15 young people were drinking and responded abusively when told that was illegal.

One officer said verbal abuse was stepped up after two persons were arrested and placed in a police car. He said one car tried to block the departure of the police vehicle from the park and several carloads of young people followed the police car to the Colwood office to continue complaints.

This Man's Taking Maternity Leave

Dennis's wife expects a baby July 7, and the Stamford school board says any teacher "upon the birth or adoption of a child" is entitled to two years of leave.

"I'll lose a whole year's salary but I'm going to gain a lot of things that can't be measured in dollars," Dennis said Monday.

"It will be very emotionally satisfying."

The school board allows men and women to take maternity leave in an effort to comply with federal anti-sex-discrimination guidelines that take effect July 21.

Dennis, a 35-year-old high school psychologist, said he and his wife, Naomi, decided last summer to have their first child.

"Since the baby would be something very dear to us, we wanted to be together with it in the beginning," said Dennis, adding that he wasn't sure at first whether he could get a leave.

But last March the board's anti-sex-discrimination policy was issued.

"The idea snapped into place—the time was right," said Dennis, noting approval for the leave came after a request for it by letter.

"A lot of other men would probably like to take child-care leaves when their wives have babies but they won't permit themselves to because ours is a society where productivity is all important," Dennis said. "Most people measure themselves in relation to various yardsticks of success. They won't take a year to develop themselves as human beings."

Dennis said he and his wife, who will also take a leave from her job as a drug counsellor in the New York City school system, plan to take their newborn infant on a cross-country journey in the fall.

Life on Mars Seems Likely

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Evidence of low-lying water vapor on Mars in greater abundance than expected has encouraged scientists to look for life as the Viking 1 spacecraft begins a 10-day study of the planet.

In low areas of Mars it appears that water in the form of frost becomes water vapor during the warmest part of the day and freezes again at night, Dr. C. Barney Farmer said Monday.

This information gathered by the Viking in recent days fits a new theory that the water might temporarily exist as a liquid during the transition from frost to vapor. It had generally been thought that water did not exist as a liquid on Mars.

Scientists on the Viking team that will search for Martian life by means of an automated Viking lander were intrigued by Farmer's report.

If his theory is true, said one scientist, low-lying Chrsye, the planned landing site, "could be one of the wettest places around." And the wetter the area, the greater the chance that some kind of life might exist there.

But by earth standards, it would scarely be wet at all.

Farmer said the water vapor mapping instrument aboard Viking has found some low areas in the planet's northern hemisphere where the abundance of water vapor was "many times" the average for the hemisphere's 10 to 12 precipitable microns.

The term refers to the amount of water that could be squeezed out of a given abundance of water vapor. In the above example, the water vapor present could be condensed into a layer around the entire planet only 10 to 12 microns thick. A micron is a tiny unit—one-millionth of a metre—invisible to the naked eye.

Beginning today, Viking's water vapor mapper, heat detector and powerful television cameras were to be trained on the area where the lander is to touch down July 4.

Rainmaking Eyed As One Solution To Forest Fires

OTTAWA (CP) — A cloud-seeding experiment to attempt to increase rainfall for forest fire control is to begin June 26 at Yellowknife, N.W.T., the environment department announced Monday.

The three-week experiment by the national weather office, the National Research Council's aeronautical branch and the Canadian forestry service, is to involve three aircraft, a department news release said.

A Twin Otter equipped with instruments for cloud measurement will penetrate a cumulus cloud selected on criteria of temperature and height, and following this the cloud will be seeded with silver iodide pyrotechnic flares carried by a T-33 jet aircraft.

The Twin Otter will then observe changes in the physical structure of the cloud, and the third aircraft will monitor its rainfall. About 10 clouds will be seeded.

Initial studies at Yellowknife last July indicated substantial numbers of ice crystals were formed in a cloud following silver iodide seeding. The current experiment seeks to determine if ice crystal formation can lead to rainfall for fire-fighting needs, the department said.

Tall Ships Moving Slowly

The 16 tall ships remaining in the competition were spread out over 100 miles moving through calm seas at five to seven miles an hour.

Some observers expect the British ketch, Great Britain 11, to be the first to cross the finish line, possibly Wednesday.

Meanwhile in Bermuda the captain of the Spanish schooner Juan Sebastian de Elcano filed a protest against the Argentine bark Libertad over the collision Sunday.

Western Nations Approve Curbs on Multinationals

PARIS (AP) — Canada, the United States, and other non-Communist industrial powers have approved voluntary anti-corruption guidelines for multinational corporations.

The code of conduct, a direct result of the Lockheed scandals, was adopted Monday by 23 of the 24 members of the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD). Turkey abstained, but it was not known why.

The code calls on corporations whose operations across national boundaries make them difficult to police not to offer bribes to public servants, to abstain from any improper involvement in local political activities, to publish financial statements "and other pertinent information relating to the enterprise as a whole" at least once a year, and to "refrain from actions which would adversely affect competition."

The code also calls on multinationals to pay the correct amount of taxes in the countries in which profits are earned and to respect the right of employees to join unions and bargain collectively.

Canada welcomed the code but reserved the right to impose its own regulations as well.

SIMON EXPRESSES INFLATION FEAR

PARIS (AP) — The risk of a new round of inflation is the greatest threat to continued economic expansion among the industrialized countries, U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon said today.

"We must do everything possible to build a public understanding of the tragic effects of inflation," Simon told a meeting of the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD).

"Some believe that demand will not be strong enough to support further expansion. I do not see major near-term distortions in the continued expansion from the demand side. To the contrary, the greatest threat to the sustained expansion is the risk of a resurgence of inflation."

He estimated the annual rate of inflation in the United States will drop to nearly five per cent by the end of the year and that unemployment will decrease to less than seven per cent.

Wanda in Battle For Second Spot

Lucille Lemay of Boisebriand, Que., has virtually sewed up first place in the women's competition but the men's event is still wide open at trials to select a Canadian Olympic archery team currently underway at St. Michael's University School.

Following the third day of the four-day trials Monday, Mrs. Lemay had opened up a 67-point lead over runner-up Wanda Allan of Victoria.

The final round to select the team of two men and two women for the Montreal Olympics was scheduled to be completed today.

Mrs. Lemay fired rounds of 280 and 279 for 559 out of a possible 720 Monday to boost her aggregate total of 1,740.

Miss Allan bounced back from a morning effort of 254 with an afternoon round of 293 for an aggregate of 1,673.

Lucille Lessard of Loretteville, Que., maintained her fast-closing pace to move within seven points of Miss Allan.

Miss Lessard, a pre-tourney favorite, is closely followed by Jean Mainland of Belleville, Ont. (1,662), Juliette Rochon of Val d'Or, Que. (1,644) and Joan McDonald of Toronto (1,629).

Gerri Cosgrove of Victoria, who fired a 527 Monday, occupies eighth spot with 1,581 and Mary Wills of Victoria has 1,446.

Ted Gamble of Calgary continues to lead the men's division with 1,785 with rounds of 278 and 304 but the former British archery team member is facing a stiff challenge from both Dave Mannof Coquitlam and Don Warren of Haney.

Mann matched Gamble's rounds to boost his total to 1,757 and Warren, who with 309 had the day's best round in the afternoon, is close behind with 1,744.

Mrs. Lemay's husband, Roger, who was runner-up after two days of competition, fired 558 Monday to drop into fourth spot witth 1,735.

In addition to the four-member Olympic team, a team of four men and four women will be chosen to represent Canada at the Chappionship of the Americas shoot in Valley Forge, Pa., in August and the world championships in Canberra, Australia, next spring.

The competition Monday doubles as the first rounds of the Canadian championships, which continue beginning at 9 a.m. daily through Friday.

Target events are scheduled to conclude Wednesday at St. Michael's and field events get underway Thursday with a clout shoot at the host Victoria Bowmen range on Wilfert Road in Colwood.

Clout shooting originates from days when bows were used as weapons of war. Arrows are shot at a steep angle from a distance at targets set horizontally on the ground.

Field events conclude Friday with women competing on the Seaview Archers range at the corner of the Trans-Canada Highway and Admirals Road and men vying on the Wilfert Road range.

MACS TACKLE WESTMINSTER

New Westminster Salmonbellies will be trying to move into a tie for second place with Burnaby Cablevision, one point behind Victoria McDonalds, when they take on the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League leaders at 8 tonight in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Cables, who edged McDonalds 21-20 in overtime Sunday, and New Westminster will both have a game in hand over the Victoria club following tonight's game.

Chris, Evonne Open With Fast Victories

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert and Evonne Goolagong, top seeds in the women's singles, each won their opening matches in less than an hour today as the second day of the Wimbledon tennis championship began in hot sunshine.

Miss Evert, the 1974 champion, had an easy 6-1, 6-1 victory over Lindo Rupert Thomas, a fellow American.

Miss Goolagong, winner of the title in 1971, had a little more difficulty beating Elly Vessies-Appel of the Netherlands 6-2, 7-5.

Virginia Wade of Britain, the No. 3 seed, defeated 17-year-old Michele Tyler of England 6-3, 6-4.

The 24,500 fans who swarmed into the All-England Club for opening day Monday saw no big upsets.

Defending champion and No. 1 seed Arthur Ashe and all the seeded men's singles players who got on court came away victorious.

Ashe, whose emotional victory over Jimmy Connors in the 1975 final still is discussed here, had a good workout against Ferdi Taygan of Framingham, Mass., who was making his Wimbledon debut.

Despite 10 double faults and a couple of set points saved, Ashe emerged a 7-5, 6-4, 7-5 winner.

Connors also showed why he is the No. 2 seed and the bookmakers' favorite to regain the title he won in 1974, easily beating Antonio Zugarelli of Italy 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

The other seeds who made it to the second round were Ilie Nastase of Romania, Bjorn Borg of Sweden, Adriano Panatta of Italy, Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., Mexico's Raul Ramirez, Tom Okker of the Netherlands, John Newcombe and Tony Roche of Australia, Jaime Fillol of Chile and Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The only seed not to play Monday was Stan Smith of Sea Pines, S.C., whose match against Patricio Cornejo of Chile was scheduled today.

Ashe said his objective simply was to make it into Wimbledon's second week before worrying about facing the top players. He named his most feared rivals as Tanner, Nastase and Connors, but said there were many other tough, unheralded players in the field.

One of those could be Ashe's next opponent, Allan Stone of Australia. Stone beat Ashe last year only one day after the 32-year-old Miami, Fla., star had won the World Championship of Tennis final.

Meanwhile, Ashe said that women's tennis is somewhat different.

"After Evonne (Goolagong of Australia) and Chrissie Evert, it just drops off like a cliff. No one else is in their class," he said.

Office's Hitting Streak Provides Deep-Down Joy

By The Associated Press

Outfielder Rowland Office of Atlanta Braves is loving every bit of attention his hitting is getting him.

"It is sort of a pain at times, everybody asking me about it, but deep down I really like it," he said Monday night after collecting four hits in Atlanta's 11-9 National League baseball win over Houston Astros.

"In fact," said Office, "I'm enjoying every single minute of it."

Office drove in three runs with two doubles and two singles to extend his hitting streak to 26 games.

In Monday's other National League games, Cincinnati Reds downed Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1, Philadelphia Phillies widened their East Division lead over idle Pittsburgh Pirates to 8½ games by pounding Montreal Expos 8-3, San Diego Padres beat San Francisco Giants 6-3 and St. Louis mauled New York Mets 7-2.

In American League games, Baltimore Orioles blanked Boston Red Sox 2-0, Texas Rangers nipped Oakland A's 1-0 in 10 innings, New York Yankees stopped Cleveland Indians 6-0, California Angels nipped Minnesota Twins 2-1 in 10 innings, Chicago White Sox defeated Kansas City Royals 2-1 in 11 innings and Detroit Tigers turned back Milwaukee Brewers 3-2 in 11 innings.

Office's streak is second in the majors this year only to Ron LeFlore's 30 for Detroit Tigers. He is just five games behind the Atlanta record of 31 set by Rico Carty, but is 11 behind the National League record of 37 set by Tommy Holmes of Boston Braves in 1945.

"They were just falling in," he said of his four hits in Monday's game. "This can't go on forever.

"All I can do is just swing the bat."

The Braves victory was their fourth in a row and their sixth in eight games. The loss was Houston's seventh in eight games.

"I can't help thinking about the streak all the time. Everybody keeps asking me about the streak, and they keep flashing it on the scoreboards."

"You can't help worrying about it a little," said Office, who has improved his batting average to .308 from .193 during his streak.

Office had a run-scoring double in the third inning, another one in a five-run fourth, a run-scoring single in the fifth and a single prior to Jimmy Wynn's decisive homer in the seventh.

Ken Griffey and George Foster accounted for Cincinnati's winning runs when they hit Doug Rau's first two pitches in the sixth inning out of the park. The win increased the Reds' lead over the Dodgers in the National League West to 4½ games.

Bert Blyleven won his first game for the Rangers since coming to Texas from Minnesota, allowing only a fifth-inning single by Ken McMullen. New York's Ed Figueroa limited the Indians to three hits.

T-Men Take Thriller

Nanaimo Timbermen, who next take on leading Victoria Shamrocks, moved into a tie for third place with Coquitlam Adanacs by edging New Westminster Salmonbellies 11-10 before about 700 fans Monday night in Nanaimo.

Jim Wasson scored his second goal of the game 25 seconds into the overtime period to give Timbermen the victory.

The teams were tied 3-3 at the end of the first period and 7-7 going into the third.

Bob Wassen and Brian Evans led Nanaimo with three goals each and single tallies were contributed by Rich Baker, Roger Dubyna and Jim Lynch.

COMFY TEST CUSHION

LONDON (Reuter) — England was 223 for seven in its second innings at the close on the fourth day of the second cricket test Monday against the West Indies.

England has an over-all lead of 291 after making 250 in its first innings at Lord's. The West Indies replied with 182 in their first innings.

Although virtually safe from defeat with its over-all lead and two wickets in hand, the day was not as productive as England might have wished.

England scored 196 runs for seven wickets after resuming at 27 without loss in the second innings and twice moved into an attacking position before being pegged back on each occasion.

The loss of night-watchman Pat Pocock and opener Mike Brearley inside the first four overs gave the West Indies an early boost and England's senior pair, David Steele and Brian Close, were forced to fight hard to re-establish the innings.

The pair put on a solid 83, in 137 minutes, for the third wicket before Close was brilliantly caught and bowled by Vanburn Holder for 46. Steele went on to score 64 — his second half-century in 10 test innings — before he became one of Andy Roberts' four victims.

Cleveland Path Clear

NEW YORK (AP) — The path of a National Hockey League team to Cleveland appears to have been cleared, it was learned Monday.

Two independent sources said Monday night that an announcement relevant to the NHL's operation in Cleveland will be made some time today.

It also was learned that the World Hockey Association's board of trustees had conducted a poll by telephone last Friday on the prospective move of the WHA Crusaders franchise from Cleveland to Hollywood, Fla.

Although the decision of the voters could not be ascertained, a WHA source said with regard to the Cleveland franchise: "I think we're out of there officially."

Bill Putnam, a former NHL and WHA executive, has been attempting to obtain the Crusaders for the newly-built Hollywood Sportatorium in Florida. Asked concerning the prospective announcement in Cleveland, Putnam said: "No comment."

Should it be announced that the Crusaders' move has been approved by the trustees, the wheels could then be set in motion for an NHL move to the Ohio city. Current indications are that the moved franchise would be California Golden Seals, whose owner, Mel Swig, has made clear his intention to move the team or sell it because of an inability to build a new arena in downtown San Francisco.

Swig said Monday night that his club's future would be determined by the end of the week.

NHL President Clarence Campbell was asked Monday night with regard to the status of the Seals and Kansas City Scouts—an NHL club under severe financial strain.

His reaction was: "I don't think you're asking something to which I can give an answer. There are a couple of things on the fire which I can't afford to disclose because it would trigger some other reactions which the affected parties would prefer not to have discussed."

GRAAS SWINGS HOT BAT

Dave Graas cracked a double and a home run Monday to lead Kubicek's Home Service to a 6-4 victory over Gorge Hotel in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Graas, who had only two official times at bat, scored once and drove in three runs. His bases-empty homer in the fifth inning went over the centre field fence, 360 feet from home plate.

Dale Aune, who picked up the pitching victory with relief help from Gerry Lister, also was two-for-two at the plate.

Rams Wait For Answer On O.J. Bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of Los Angeles Rams says he has made an offer for the National Football League's ace running-back O. J. Simpson and should have an answer from Buffalo Bills within 10 days.

Rosenbloom didn't disclose his offer and admitted the Bills' owner Ralph Wilson wanted a "great package" for the former all-American and Heisman Trophy winner from Southern California.

North Koreans Withdraw From Qualifying Tourney

HAMILTON (CP) — The North Korean women's basketball team has withdrawn from a 12-day Olympic qualifying tournament scheduled to begin today, tournament organizers said Monday.

No reason was given for the withdrawal. Tournament officials are drawing up a new game schedule for the women's teams which will take part in the tournament.

Marty Zuchotcki, a member of the tournament committee, said the committee received a telegram Monday morning from the orth Koreans saying the team would not be there.

The final five places in the lineups — three for men's teams and two for women — are up for grabs in the tournament.

Nine countries have already tied down berths in the men's competition and four have been named to the women's section for the Games tournament, to be played in Montreal, July 18-27.

As many as seven games a day will be played in preliminary rounds of the qualifying tournament leading to interdivisional finals scheduled for July 1-3.

Already qualified for Montreal in men's competition are the Soviet Union, the defending Olympic champions, Cuba, Japan, Australia and Canada in Group A and the United States, Italy, Puerto Rico and the United Arab Republic in Group B.

In the women's competition, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Japan and Canada have already been assured of spots in the Games.

Still looking for the three remaining places in the men's tournament at Montreal are Yugoslavia, Brazil, Czechoslovakia, Israel, Finland and Iceland in Group A and Spain, Mexico, Poland, Sweden, the Netherlands, Bulgaria and Britain in Group B.

KEELING RETIRES

HAMILTON (CP) — Veteran quarterback Jerry Keeling of Hamilton Tiger-Cats retired Monday after 15 seasons in the Canadian Football League.

Keeling, 36, joined Hamilton last season after three years with Ottawa Rough Riders and 11 with Calgary Stampeders.

The University of Tulsa product was a defensive halfback for his first eight season with Calgary, then swithced to quarterback in 1969. He led Calgary to the Grey Cup in 1971 and repeated with Ottawa in 1972.

Lions Close to Limit

PENTICTON (CP) — Head coach Cal Murphy pared six players from British Columbia Lions' training camp roster Monday, getting near the 50-player limit the Canadian Football League allows before the exhibition season opens.

Lions now head for Regina, where they meet Saskatchewan Roughriders Friday in the CFL's first exhibition game.

Three imports were cut Monday, Ivan Jordan, a rookie linebacker out of Arkansas, Ken Thomas, a defensive tackle and linebacker from Tulsa, and Allan Brown, a split end out of Hawaii.

Ten-year CFL veteran Lanny Boleski, 35, retired and two other Canadians were cut — Brian Berg, a placekicking guard picked up from Saskatchewan last year as a free agent, and Sean Sullivan, a running back and flanker out of Simon Fraser University.

The club has two players in camp over the 50-man limit, Ed Thomas, a placekicker the club is allowed to carry as an over-roster junior, and John Turecki, who expects to return for the season to University of British Columbia.

One player noticeable missing Monday was rookie quarterback John Sciarra, who attended a banquet and graduation at UCLA Saturday and who has been held up by the air pilots strike.

The club may be forced to bus its way at least part way to Regina if the air strike continues. It could travel to Seattle or Spokane by bus and fly to Minot, N.D., and bus again from there to Regina, or it could travel by bus all the way.

Bob Bell has players on his side.

Last week, in case you missed it, the Uplands executive rapped golfers who fail to turn in cards or miss tee-off appointments in tournaments such as the City Amateur. Bell hopes the Victoria District Golf Committee will introduce legislation that will ban offending players from the same tournament the following year.

Colwood's Mike Kolb seconds the motion but wants to go one step further. El Kolbo is one of several area golfers who wound up playing in twosomes because of no-shows in the recent B.C. Amateur.

The several have filed a letter of protest with the B.C. Golf Association. They feel Bell's idea, that of banning the no-show players from next year's tournament, should be considered by the provincial body.

Two champions displayed a touch of class at the recent Gorge Vale field day for women.

Dale Shaw of Glen Meadows and Marilyn Palmer of Marine Drive, who teamed up to win low-gross honors, turned their prizes over to the district's junior girls' development committee.

The contribution will be used to build up the prize list in the city junior tournament July 5.

Not all B.C. clubs belong to the PNGA. That doesn't prevent girls from non-affiliated clubs from entering, a point Munn wishes to make clear.

Colwood's Sydney Thomson is the defending champion.

SHORT CHIPS: The Pacific Northwest Golf Association seniors move in on Colwood this week, but you may be wondering what happened to the junior senior tournament . . . The PNGA's attempt to inaugurate a tournament for golfers between 40 and 54 years of age — scheduled for Oak Bay earlier this month — had to be scratched because of a lack of interest . . . John Morgan scored a final-round 77 (to go with earlier rounds of 71 and 73) and missed the money by two strokes in the Ontario Open . . .

Ernie Wheeler, a 69-year-old Cedar Hill member, shot his age with a four-over-par 68 last week . . . Also turning in a hot round in recent days was Oak Bay pharmacist Roy Tucker . . . A 17-handicap, Roy slapped his Victoria Club layout with a 73 . . . And a smattering of aces to report: Art Blair on the sixth at Cedar Hill, Eric Graham on Glen Meadows' 15th, Gerry Arsenault on the 10th at Gorge Vale, and Colwood member Joe Kutyik, on the first at Birch Bay . . . Kutyik's shot was timely . . . It started his team, which also included Barry McCue, George Ferguson and Vic Auburn, off to a victory in the provincial Army-Navy-Air Force Veterans' tournament . . .

Tenth annual Hotel-Motel tournament goes at Colwood on June 30 and Hugh Thorburn wants to remind the crew that entries must be in by June 28 . . . John Cannon, 17, got his par in spectacular fashion on Upland's first hole the other day . . . Lying three, with the hole still some 250 yards off in the distance, Cannon spanked the next shot into the hole . . . First two of the all-important trial rounds that will determine makeup of the provincial women's teams are to be played at Colwood and Glen Meadows this weekend . . . SHOULD A CAR WITH A REPUTATION FOR BEING SO SAFE GO SO FAST?
Volvo has become the very symbol of the safe, sane automobile designed for rational people. But test drive a Volvo 240 today, and you'll also see it's "one hell of a fun car to drive." (Road Test magazine).
There's a new fuel-injected overhead cam engine for fast acceleration. Rack and pinion steering. An improved front suspension. And a 4-speed manual transmission with optional overdrive.
All of which does, indeed make Volvo a delight to drive.
But Volvo also thinks the faster a car responds and the better it handles, the safer it will be.
So while many of these new performance features are nice to have when you want them, they're even nicer to have when you need them.

TOWN TALK

If any tourists travelling on the Black Ball ferry from Port Angeles to Victoria this Saturday have the strange feeling that someone is watching them, they'll probably be right.

In another of their socially significant enterprises, members of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce say they will be "screening various passengers" on the ferry to pick their Tourist of the Month.

There will be similar selections July 31 and Aug. 28, the recipients being showered with various goodies including hotel accommodation, meals and tourist attraction passes.

The Jaycees' news release doesn't explain what the criteria are for picking the winners. But our guess is that hungry-looking tramps need not bother smuggling themselves aboard in the hope of grabbing some freebies.

Victoria's hanging basket fame is spreading.

A recent issue of the City of Tallahassee Newsletter ran an article on a parks and recreation project in that Florida community that began: "A beautification project in Victoria, B.C. has been adopted by Tallahassee and involves 118 hanging flower baskets in downtown Tallahassee. . . ."

The Jasmine Garden Circle introduced the idea which gained support of city fathers and was funded through the bicentennial commission.

Miss Kilsby was raised in Victoria, attended Sir James Douglas and Victoria High schools and Victoria College before leaving in 1947. She served in the Canadian navy before entering external affairs and among her postings have been Buenos Aires and New Delhi.

In Los Angeles she is an adviser to Scripps College, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Business and Professional Women's Club, the philharmonic orchestra society and several other community organizations.

BETTER SEWERS OPEN WAY TO DEVELOPERS

Saanich Ready to Move

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Saanich is ready now to move ahead with commercial and apartment development in key areas of the municipality as a result of the upgrading of sewers, Mayor Ed Lum said today.

He invited developers to come forward with their proposals because many of them could go ahead now that the sewer problem was just about solved.

"In some areas work permits could be issued immediately. In other areas it will be a matter of only 12 months at the most. We are ready for development."

The areas where development will be centred include Shelbourne near Cedar Hill and McKenzie, the area south of Lansdowne road, the Gorge and new development in the Colquitz area including the Roy Road development.

In addition, there will be some development in areas which are tributary to these main areas.

The problem in the past has been overloaded sewer capacity. Saanich was constructing six inch pipelines, when according to recent studies by the capital regional district the lines should have been eight inches in diameter.

The solution, rather than to re-sewer the municipality, has been to build new large trunk lines and divert the sewage flow. This project will be completed within 12 months and developers should begin their projects now to be ready for the changed conditions in the municipality, he said.

The expected development will take the form of commercial and apartment expansion in the Shelbourne area.

In the Saanich panhandle (where it joins Oak Bay and Victoria) south of Lansdowne there will soon be a capacity for apartment development.

The Gorge area will open up for residential development.

The Colquitz-Roy Road area will open up for residential development as a result of new sewer construction. The Roy Road line will require additional sewer capacity in Victora as well, Lum said.

The Saanich trunk line is an 18-inch pipe and narrows to a 15-inch pipe at the boundary at Burnside and Harriet. Lum said the Victoria line will be twinned (a second line will be constructed) and this work will begin very soon. Saanich would pay a large portion of the cost of the sewer line through Victoria to the Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

Saanich's development has been hindered by the lack of sewer capacity through the Macaulay Point outfall.

Now there are three main sewer exits for the municipality and the flexibility of being able to divert into one of the three lines is opening up areas for development.

In recent years, 85 per cent of Saanich sewage went the Macaulay route. About five per cent went directly south (along the Victoria-Oak Bay border) to Clover Point. The other 10 per cent went through the university area to exit at Finnerty Cove, north of Ten Mile Point.

Within five years, 25 per cent of Saanich sewage will leave by Finnerty Cove opening up the Shelbourne area to higher density development as well as handling the expansion of single family homes and townhouses in Gordon Head.

Work is already under way in twinning and upgrading small existing sewer lines near Shelbourne to prepare for this additional capacity.

Expansion of apartments into the panhandle south of Lansdowne will be accomplished through use of the sewage line south to Clover Point.

Development in western portions of the municipality will depend upon the upgraded route to Macaulay Point.

In addition to these lines, work is proceeding on a sewer toward the Cordova Bay area. At the present time the flow is from the area south of Cordova Bay toward Macaulay Point. The possibility exists, however, that an outfall could be constructed at Cordova Bay and have the flow in the opposite direction.

This nine-acre parcel of land on the Gorge is being considered for apartment development

261 Waterway Suites Proposed

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A group of Victoria businessmen, calling themselves 76 Developments, plans to build 261 apartments on nine acres fronting the Gorge.

Municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said today the hearing date has not yet been set, but it will probably be in mid-July.

The developers have options on the property which is now owned by John Traunweiser. The property now houses the San Sebastien Motel and the Victoria Motor Court.

Terry Farmer, spokesman for the group, told the Times the apartments will include some rental but will be mostly condominiums. Some will have one bedroom, others will have three bedrooms but the majority will be two-bedroom units.

There will be six four-storey buildings, with an average distance of 140 feet between them to allow passers-by views of the waterway.

The development, to be built in stages, will be in frame construction, Farmer said, in order to keep down costs of the units.

"Every suite will have a view of the Gorge," he said. "The buildings will be jogged with angular windows that all look down on the Gorge."

Architect for the project is Hamilton Doyle of Vancouver.

In the land-use contract prepared by the municipality and the developers, 76 Developments have donated a 40-foot strip along the waterfront from the park up to and including the point on the property. Farmer said the land mostly will be made available for walkways.

A waterfront strip on the rest of the property also will be given to Saanich. Farmer said this would allow Saanich to build a water-level causeway.

Because of sewer problems in the area, Farmer estimated it would be 18 months before the project gets under way.

The land-use contract also allows the developers to build a recreation facility on the site. Farmer said this would include a community building with a lounge, meeting rooms and saunas, as well as an outdoor swimming pool.

He said the project has been two years in the planning stage.

Aldermen were enthusiastic about the project at Monday's meeting. "They're going out of their way to co-operate," Ald. Roy Wootten said of the developers.

In the contract, the developers have agreed to pay part of the costs of installing new sewers in the Gorge area. The amount was not disclosed at Monday's meeting but Ald. John McDonald conceded later that "it's a sizeable chunk . . . upward of $200,000."

The council also approved rezoning to allow an 81-unit apartment complex proposed for 4014, 4020 and 4026 Quadra by the Concord Development Corp.

Because the units will be rental, Saanich stands to gain financial assistance from the senior governments to help in servicing costs — $81,000 from the federal government and $40,500 from the provincial government.

High Tax Dispute: The Buck Passed On

The Mayor and the Citizen today agreed to blame somebody else for high taxes in the continuing battle of the Oak Bay Holdback.

Citizen Larry Slaght has withheld part of his Oak Bay property taxes to protest the 18.86 per cent increase in the mill rate.

Mayor Brian Smith said citizens should protest large tax increases but holding back on taxes is not the way to do it — and they should take care to select the real villain.

The Oak Bay mill rate for general municipal purposes is up only 7.79 per cent, Smith said.

By contrast, the school mill rate is up 27.54 per cent.

In addition, Slaght should be protesting inflationary spending by senior levels of government, particularly Ottawa. The provincial government has increased its spending 12 per cent above the 1975 budget while Ottawa's expenditures are expected to rise at least 14 per cent this year.

"Citizens who are concerned about taxes and inflation should bring pressure to bear on the federal government to control its expenditures," Smith said.

"However, I agree with Mayor Smith that the school costs are the main reason my taxes have gone up."

Slaght said the mayors should get together and insist that municipal councils have the power to approve or reject school budgets.

SMITH

"There is a bit of conflict of interest when educators sit on school boards and set their own budgets," Slaght said.

"I think it is good for educators to be on school boards because they have the background and education to deal with that type of problem. But they should not have the final say on the budget. The council should be able to approve or disapprove them."

Slaght has already sent in his partial tax payment, holding back that portion of his taxes above a 10 per cent increase. He selected the 10 per cent figure as being within the spirit of the Anti-Inflation Board guidelines. He said a few other Oak Bay citizens had indicated they would follow his example and hold back their taxes.

He has also sent letters of protest to the Oak Bay council and the school board.

"I know I will have to pay a tax penalty but I am prepared to pay that. It is worth it to make this protest. Somebody has to do something."

Taxes must be paid by June 30 or a five-per-cent-per-year penalty begins on the unpaid portion, starting in July. After three months, this is increased to 10 per cent per year. After three years, the unpaid portion must be paid along with the penalty or a tax sale proceeding could begin.

Meanwhile, Smith said the local mayors have already had one meeting with the school board to try to find out why costs are rising so quickly there and the mayors have asked for another meeting soon.

The first indication from the school board is that somebody else is to blame. The increase, says the school board, was due to a decline in the education grants from the provincial government.

N. Saanich Hearing Tonight

It's round two tonight in North Saanich when a public hearing into a proposed new zoning bylaw continues at 7:30 in the Legion hall.

About 200 people turned out Monday night for the start of the hearing and as anticipated a proposal for a minimum seven-acre lot size sparked the most criticism.

Opponents appeared to outnumber and certainly outtalked proponents. People who own larger sections of land are concerned they will be unable to subdivide as planned, in some cases to produce retirement income.

The crowd was so large Monday night it even produced comments through the hall's windows, as latecomers found themselves waiting outside. Mayor Paul Grieve maintained order by repeatedly refusing to permit clapping, cheering, booing or stamping of feet.

The hearing also received presentations in favor of a commission to hear subdivision applications, occupancy permits to permit in-law suites and against the proposed bylaw's restrictions on building placement and property use.

Vander Zalm, Coroner Hear Different Reports

Department of human resources policies had no connection to the death of a 58-year-old Victoria woman whose friends said she was afraid of being cut off welfare, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday.

Vander Zalm said he has reports which clearly deny allegations that Honor Eastman threw herself in front of a car June 10 because of her fear of having her welfare incentive payments cut.

The minister said he would make the reports public later.

However, at an inquest which began Monday night into the woman's death, David Paterson, 1667 Cedar Hill Road, the driver of the car involved in the accident, testified Mrs. Eastman appeared to have "lunged" into the right side of his car.

Paterson's wife, Margaret, a front-seat passenger, said the woman suddenly appeared and, her husband shouted, "That woman, what is she doing?"

"I got the impression more like we were being attacked," she said after the dead woman's daughter, Caroline Free of Calgary, suggested her mother might have fallen accidentally into the car.

City police constable Tom Sibbald told the inquest he had been called to an earlier accident a short distance away where a driver told him a woman had walked into the side of his car and then walked off, saying she had slipped on the pavement.

Sibbald said the driver described Mrs. Eastman at the time as "smiling and normal."

He told coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre and the six-man jury that Mrs. Eastman had suffered from depression and stress with periodic suicidal thoughts and considered her sanity was in jeopardy.

The inquest continues tonight starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Saanich courtroom.

In the Legislature, Norm Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) charged that Vander Zalm's policies have "directly led to the deaths of two people."

He said people in B.C. are "scared to death" of new human resources policies.

Levi said earlier an 81-year-old blind man fell to his death down an open elevator shaft in New Westminster last month because government funds which had been used to hire guides for handicapped people had been cut off.

After Mrs. Eastman's death, Susan Talbot of the Community Action Group where Mrs. Eastman was an incentive worker, said the woman had committed suicide because of the uncertainty about her incentive payments continuing.

"The relations (of Mrs. Eastman) have made it known that they feel terrible about the publicity," the minister said.

"There is no relation, no connection at all between the incident . . . and any policy that might have been adopted by the department," he said.

Levi said outside the house he was concerned about the "aura of fear" surrounding human resources policies.

"They don't know where they stand. Things are not spelled out and people are quite afraid," he said.

Times Staff

John Young has demanded Victoria school board chairman William Ross' resignation but Ross says he will hang on to his job as tenaciously as Young did when asked to resign as principal of Campbell River high school.

Young, ultimately fired by Campbell River school board in 1972 after a lengthy hearing and now a Victoria businessman, demanded Ross and superintendent of schools Jake Longmore resign, charging they violated the Public Schools Act.

In a fiery presentation to the board, Young claimed this violation led to a pupil being deprived of the right to attend classes for 55 days this spring.

Last week Ross refused Young permission to represent the 15-year-old student and his parents at a committee meeting, prompting Young to submit his brief Monday at the regular board meeting.

YOUNG

Young said a regulation adopted by the board giving the principal of the school the right to dismiss a pupil was in contravention of the Public Schools Act. He told the board he had expert legal advice on the matter.

Ross said the board also had legal advice in drafting the regulation and in his opinion, the section Young criticized had worked very well in getting dismissed students back into classes.

He said the regulation was adopted as an intermediate step before going to a firm dismissal or expulsion allowed under the schools act.

Ross said in all such cases the board makes every effort to keep the child in school.

Longmore said later in the meeting the provincial government had recently introduced Bill 55 which may revise the very section of the Public Schools Act with which Young was concerned.

The revisions, if passed, could give the principals more authority in pupil dismissal — the area Young claimed the board had already given to district principals.

After the meeting, Ross said any time a question of legality of board policies is questioned by any citizen, it is a good idea to undertake a review.

Ross said he wouldn't resign. He said he implemented the school's policies both in spirit and intent in accordance with the Public Schools Act and the board's own policies in this particular case.

"I will be very tenacious in hanging onto my position as Mr. Young was determined when asked to resign. If the outcome is the same as Mr. Young's, however, I'm in trouble."

Young's presentation to the board took more than the half-hour allotted to all public delegations and as a result several others including the father of the dismissed pupil, were not allowed to speak to the board.

SAANICH GIVES Y $57,210

Saanich council Monday agreed to give $57,210 over a four-year period toward the YM-YWCA's expansion project.

Some aldermen, however, had reservations on whether or not, when the building is completed, Saanich should increase its share of the grant given the YM-YWCA for taxes.

"We will be looking at the major share of the tax burden," cautioned Mayor Ed Lum. "It's an ongoing thing."

Ald. Mary Casilio said she could not support giving the grant because Saanich's own recreation program had been defeated in the November referendum. "They (the YM-YWCA) are also getting money from the Community Chest," she added.

Ald. Sandy Noel said he would not support entering into any "open-ended agreement," noting that the Racquet Club of Victoria, located in Saanich, was also in need of help.

"They (the Racquet Club) are just about going down the proverbial financial drain," he said. "I'm hoping we can give a little to each but not in one direction."

Ald. Fred Severson said the possibility of giving the Racquet Club a loan was being considered. "If, in the future, they decided to liquidate or sell, we'd get our money back," he said.

Ald. David Paterson, referring to the YM-YWCA's grant in lieu of taxes, said the intermunicipal committee had studied a similar proposal which would have the YM-YWCA returning grant monies if the property is sold or liquidated.

PLAIN GREY SUITS COMING BACK

LONDON (CP) — Plain grey suits are on the way back, says Michael Fish, tailor to the Rolling Stones, Lord Snowdon, The Beatles and other celebrities from the Swinging Sixties.

Back in London after a trip to New York and Montreal, Fish is predicting a sartorial revolution.

"We are living in austere times and the plain grey suit seems appropriate for smartly-dressed business men," he said.

"I believe suits with tucks at the front, nice neat buttons and trousers with sensible turn-ups (cuffs) will soon be trendy again.

"So will short-hair styles, plain white shirts and polished black shoes."

Fish himself was a flamboyant trend-setter in Swinging London during the '60s

"We have reached the stage where we are apprehensive about our futures," he said. "I know many men who dress soberly today because they are afraid of losing their jobs. The flamboyant days of the '60s are over. The bosses are getting on top again and they like their staff to dress with dignity."

Patricia Gallagher gives a wine lesson to tourists

Wine Tasting's a Challenge

PARIS (NYT) — Under normal circumstances, the steward presents the bottle of wine to the male diner, who tastes the wine and approves it ceremoniously with a nod. But that exclusive male role faces a challenge as many American women in Paris are tasting wines seriously and analytically.

One place where this is going on is the P.L.M. St. Jacques Hotel, where Mary Berley swirled a young bordeaux around in her glass the other day to release its aroma for a group of tourists taking her wine apreciation course.

Mrs. Berley, an American, was just back from a quick three-day finishing course in Bordeaux at Chateau Lafite-Rothschild. While there, she was also guided around other famous chateaus including Haut-Brion, Latour and Beychevelle, her escort being the wine connoissuer Guy Schyler, once prorietor of Chateau Margaux.

But she learned most of her wine tasting from Raymond Cordier, who was head barman and wine director aboard the Normandy and the France for 40 years, and will be helping with Mrs. Berley's courses.

"I became interested in wines years ago when my husband and I found a nice French restaurant in Chicago without a liquor licence and we had to bring our own wine," Mrs. Berley said. "We started wondering which wines to bring. I remember then always being intimidated by wine stewards waiting for our approval of a wine; all we could do was smile and say 'fine thanks.'

"I met Raymond when we moved to France seven years ago on the France. I spent most of the trip learning about wine tasting with him. I kept my knowledge under cover for a while; I didn't think my husband would appreciate it. A few years later after much reading up and a lot of wine drinking I took friends to Maxim's for dinner and upset the husband, a Texan who admitted he knew nothing about wine, by choosing the wine myself.

"But it wasn't really my choosing the wine that upset him; it was my talking to the wine steward and being asked to do the tasting in a restaurant."

Her course is given in two one-and-a-half-hour evening sessions. The first night is an examination of red, white and rose wines with some of their history, explanations of how they are made and why they are different.

The second night is a tasting of two wines from each of the seven wine regions of France. The course costs $20.

"The course won't make you an expert, but it will give you enough confidence to want to know more," she said.

"Instead of bringing home perfume, I think it's nice for women — and men — to come away from France knowing more about wine; it seems such an essential ingredient to living well."

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS ...it tells you how

Herb cuttings are best taken on a dry, sunny day (Leave enough foliage so plants will not die). Rinse them quickly if they're dusty. Shake out as much water as possible and discard yellowed leaves. Hang the cuttings in small bunches, or strip the leaves from the stems and spread on a screen placed so that air can circulate underneath. Stir leaves frequently. Dry in a warm airy location out of direct sun. If herbs are dried outdoors they must be brought in at night. When thoroughly dry (about one week) crush or chop the leaves.

Dried herbs should be stored in tightly closed containers. It's a good practice to keep them in clear, glass jars for a few days so that you can check for condensed moisture (which indicates more drying is needed!) The cured herbs should then be stored in opaque containers or kept in a dark place. Containers may be glass, ceramic, metal or plastic . . . paper and cardboard will absorb some of the flavor and fragrance and are not suitable.

Although many dried herbs will keep indefinitely under proper conditions, they should be replaced yearly if a new supply is available.

If you'd like a concise mini-manual on growing, harvesting, storing and using herbs, address a long envelope to yourself, put 8 cents postage on it and enclose it with 25 cents in an envelope addressed to Mother Earth News, c/o the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria. By Lynn and Joel Rapp

Dear Lynn and Joel:

We've had this controversy hanging over our heads for a long time: Is there such a thing as a male and female Spider Plant? My mother's Spider Plant has "babies" all the time and her babies are having more babies. It was only one year old when it had the first one. The same is true with my friend. She received two Spider Plants at the same time, and within four years one had 42 babies and the other none. If there is such a thing as a male and female, how can you tell? — Sincerely, A.W.

Dear A.W.:

Yes, there are male and female Spider Plants, just as there are males and females all over the plant kingdom. In the case of the Spider Plant, either sex can produce babies, but sometimes a "sterile" male comes along and is doomed to a life of childlessness. How to tell? Without getting into some really heavy botanical talk, the easiest way is to buy another Spider Plant.

The best bet is to buy your Spider Plant when it is already established — say in a six-inch diameter pot already dangling with babies and flowers which will eventually produce new babies.

These babies, in turn, should produce, although there is no guarantee one of the "litter" might not turn out to be the lonely sterile male. Keep your Spider Plant in very good indirect light, water only when dampish, feed regularly during the growing season, and the odds are you'll have a regular creamy-and-white maternity ward before you know it.

Sword-Swallowing Diagnoses Fading

By Dr. William J. Welch

Thanks to a wholly new type of fibre optic instrument, looking into various opening of the body to make diagnoses under direct vision is no longer a variation of a sword swallower's technique.

The physician who first devised an instrument for the examination of the gullet and the windpipe was inspired by the circus performer who bent his head back, making a straight line from throat to stomach and slipped his "sword" down his gullet.

The gastroscope (which is passed down the gullet to allow a look into the stomach), the bronchoscope (to look into the windpipe and the upper reaches of the lungs) and the sigmoidescope (which is passed into the rectum and the lower colon) are traditionally all variations of the "sword" of the sideshow. They are straight and rigid, and depend on a light bulb instrument for the light source.

With the avent of the principle of "fibre optics," instruments are now available for examination of more than the upper gastro-intestinal tract and the lungs. The entire colon can be minutely examined all the way from the anus to the point where the colon meets the small intestine.

Fibre optic instruments are much smaller in diameter and more flexible than their rigid predecessors. They transmit light and images along flexible bundles of thousands of very fine, specially coated glass fibres. These fibres are capable of producing an image that is sharply defined and brightly lighted, the latter without heat.

Colonoscopy makes it possible to detect cancer of the large bowel by direct examination in its early stages, and to diagnose other diseases of the colon which may not be identified with conventional X-ray or sigmoidoscope with the usual rigid instrument.

Effective use of the colonoscope requires extensive training. Examination of the entire colon in skilled hands may require up to one and a half hours, and although anesthesia is not required, most examiners prescribe a moderately strong sedative.

Colonoscopy requires complete cleansing of the large bowel, which is accamplished by taking a fluid diet for one or two days before the examination. A strong cathartic is taken the evening before the examination, and the next morning tap-water enemas are repeated until the returns are clear.

The examination may be conducted under fluorscopic control to verify the position of the instrument. Under suitable conditions, small biopsies may be taken from diseased portions of the bowel to be studied under the microscope.

In some circumstances it is possible to avoid exploratory surgery; in others, a physician can clarify equivocal X-rays of the colon, in which the diagnosis can only be made by direct observation.

Abby Would Ask For Ann's Advice

DEAR ABBY: Our 29-year-old daughter has been living out of town with her boyfriend for six years.

He refuses to support her, so she comes to town when she runs out of money. Then she works until she gets enough money to go back to him. She is highly educated and employable, and makes good money in her field.

What is really bothering us is that she never turns up unless she wants something. Either it's, "May I run my laundry, wash my hair, borrow your truck, fix something to eat, watch your TV, use your phone, etc., etc."

What would you say to this girl if she were yours? We are tired of being used. — GRRRRRRR.

DEAR GRRR: If she were mine, I'd probably also be "tired of being used," but too chicken-hearted to tell HER, so I'd write a letter to Ann Landers and ask her what SHE'D do.

DEAR ABBY: You told the lady who wanted to meet the bachelor next door who owned a "singing" Boston terrier: "Invite him over for a T-bone steak dinner and tell him you'll save the bone for his dog."

Abby, you whould be aware that small bones (particularly cooked fowl, steak or chop bones) can kill a dog! Such bones splinter, and can puncture the digestive tract anywhere from the animal's throat to his intestines; a puncture of the stomach or intestines can cause rapid onset of peritonitis (infection in the abdominal cavity) followed by an extremely painful death. A puncture above the stomach could damage the heart, lungs or aorta, often fatally.

If the man next door loves his dog, he should not feed it bones. — DOG LOVER.

DEAR DOG LOVER: I'm glad you picked that bone with ME. Thanks for reminding me of something I once learned and had forgotten. Readers, are you listening?

DEAR ABBY: I am not keen on your approving traditional white weddings for non-virgin brides just because it "probably was their heart's desire."

When I hurriedly arranged a church wedding for my 18-year-old daughter who had confessed that she was three-months pregnant, I told her that if she insisted on wearing a wedding veil, I would not attend her wedding.

She wore the white wedding gown, carried a bridal boquet and had her hair done up with flowers and ribbons instead of a veil.

I am not sure how many knew that she was pregnant at her wedding but when the baby arrived six-months later no remarks were made. — MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Under the circumstances, I imagine some would have disapproved of her wearing the white gown. For my part, she could have worn the veil as well.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The issuance of warrants was ordered Monday in Victoria provincial court by Judge Harold Alder for the arrests of two women witnesses who failed to show up for the preliminary hearing and trial of a 39-year-old former Victoria man.

William Lloyd Christie, now of Vancouver, had been scheduled for preliminary hearing of a Victoria charge of forcible seizure of a Victoria woman April 7 and for trial of a second charge of common assault on the same woman the same day.

Alder granted prosecutor N. K. Varma's requests for the warrants after Varma presented evidence to support a claim that the woman named in both charges had been subpoenaed but was evading attendance, and that a second woman was evading service of a subpoena.

Defence lawyer Douglas Christie argued the action could lead to lengthy detention for his client while the latter awaited the arrests of the women, William Christie, not related to the lawyer, has been in custody since his arrest June 1.

Alder noted bail was refused for William Christie June 9 when Judge William Ostler issued a detention order after a bail hearing. He suggested lawyer Christie take the case back to Ostler for a new bail discussion and said the case would be called again June 28 in Ostler's court.

Two men were remanded to July 9 by Alder for pre-sentence reports and sentence after they were found guilty at the end of a trial on a joint Victoria weapons charge.

John Glendon Flett, 25, of 816 Government, and Frank Woodrow Richards, 29, of 523 Rithet, were charged with possession of a shotgun March 30 in a Victoria motel parking lot for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. Both are in custody pending sentence.

Ostler ordered surety bail of $2,000 in the case of Robert Ernest Landry, 29, of 2988 Tillicum, who was charged Thursday with trafficking in heroin in Victoria Jan. 21. Defence lawyer Bruce McConnan entered a trial choice of judge and jury and Ostler set July 22 as a preliminary hearing date.

In another narcotics case, a charge of trafficking in marijuana Friday in Victoria was formally read against William Robert Lowe, 26, of 1414 Hillside, who was remanded to today for further hearing. Surety bail of $1,000 had been set Saturday in his case by a justice of the peace.

Separate Victoria charges of robbery with violence were read against Glen Malcolm Pratt, 21, of 1010 Balmoral, and Martin Lawrence Alphonse, 20, of 614 Esquimalt, who were remanded for one week by Ostler after saying they wanted to consult lawyers.

Both charges said the robbery victim was a Victoria area resident who, according to police, lost about $80 Sunday in a downtown hotel washroom. Pratt and Alphonse are free on their undertaking to return Monday.

In traffic court, David Edward Shipalesky, 23, of 496 Gault Crescent, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of impaired driving June 8 and was sentenced by Judge Blake Allan to a 14-day jail term, to be served intermittently.

Also pleading guilty to separate Victoria charges of impaired driving were Joseph Maloney, 1303 Gladstone, stopped June 15 and fined $500, and Manfred Ernest Harrichhausen, 19, Work Point Barracks, June 11 and $400.

Robert Sevens Stocks, 49, of 5181 Cordova Bay, was fined $450 after pleading guilty to a Victoria charge of driving June 4 with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

Indians Charge Brutality

OTTAWA (CP) — Information received Monday by the Native Council of Canada says Indian people, including pregnant women, were kicked and choked by police during a courtroom disturbance in Vancouver last Friday.

The information was contained in a wired message to the council by Rose Charley, president of the Indian Homemakers of British Columbia.

"We object to our people being grabbed by the hair, kicked and choked, particularly pregnant women," said the message.

It said police and sheriff's officers started the disturbance and used unjustified force to remove about 20 Indians from an extradition hearing for Leonard Peltier, an American Indian Movement (AIM) leader.

The Indians were removed by force when they refused to sit down. One report said fist fights broke out when the police pushed the people out of the courtroom, down the hallways and to the street.

Russel Pedner, an AIM member from Washington state, said the people stood up in respect for Peltier and because they were tired of being harassed in the court house.

"The people were prepared to leave slowly but that does not mean to say in any sense they were confronting or resisting," said the message.

Peltier, 32, was ordered extradited but his lawyers, who argue he is a political refugee, said they will appeal to the federal court. He is wanted in the United States on charges of burglary, attempted murder and murder, the latter related to the June, 1975, shooting deaths of two FBI agents on Pine Ridge Indian reserve in South Dakota.

Judge Okays Voodoo Rite

RIO DE JANEIRO (WP) — A Brazilian couple was married in a temple of Umbanda, a local voodoo cult, and a judge said, surprisingly, that the wedding could be just as valid as one in a Roman Catholic church.

The Umbanda marriage between Antonio Carlos Pereira, 24, and Telma de Castro, 22, was performed in the northeastern city of Olinda by a voodoo priest known as Pai Edu — Portuguese for "Father Ed." The wedding got nationwide press and television coverage, and the fact that Municipal Court Judge Celio Montenegro gave it a legal green light did much to legitimize the status of spirit cults here.

Although Brazil does not have an official religion, it is generally regarded as a Roman Catholic nation. Most of the 110 million people here consider themselves at least nominal Catholics. But it is widely thought that more Brazilians actively practice Umbanda and other African-based spirit religions than traditional Catholicism.

"I believe an Umbanda wedding ought to be equal to one in any other religion," Pai Edu stated, upon asking the judge for a legal opinion. "After all, Umbanda has more followers than any other religion in Brazil."

Umbanda cuts across all racial and social lines here. Guests at the Olinda wedding ranged from slum-dwelling blacks to high-society whites. Pai Edu is black, and the bride and groom were white.

Judge Montenegro said that if Pai Edu's spirit center were officially registered as a religious organization, he would consider granting civil status to the Umbanda wedding, just as he would if the newlyweds had been married in a Catholic church.

In Brazil, only a civil marriage ceremony is valid as far as the law is concerned, but often, especially in small towns where there is no permanent judge, courts will later declare church marriages to be legally binding.

Now, Gone With the Wind Part 2

HOLLYWOOD — One of Hollywood's most successful producers plans to make a sequel to the 1939 classic Gone With the Wind.

Richard Zanuck, producer of Jaws, one of two films earning more money than Gone With the Wind, said in an interview Rhett Butler and his vixen lover, Scarlett O'Hara, would be reunited in the new film.

In the original David Selznick classic, Butler ignores Miss O'hara's pleas to stay with him saying: "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn."

Use of the word "damn" caused censorship problems when the original film was made; but Selznick insisted it be retained.

"Obviously, they are going to meet again, fall in love again and resume the romance. Whether they will be together at the end of Part II is yet to be decided."

Zanuck said complex negotiations began with the estate of the late Margaret Mitchell, author of the book, in Atlanta, Ga., six or seven months ago.

He has no idea yet who would play the Scarlett O'Hara role originated by the late Vivien Leigh.

Zanuck said he was approached by the Mitchell estate to produce the sequel.

"It was very flattering. They had resisted offers for years," he said. "This is an awesome responsibility."

The new picture would cost about $10 million, compared with $3.5 million for the first, a fabulous sum in its time.

Luckily, they would not have to burn Atlanta again.

"Mr. Selznick took care of that in the first picture so we don't have to do it again," Zanuck said.

SOUL STAR WILSON PULLING SLOWLY OUT OF LONG COMA

By RICH WISEMAN

JACKIE WILSON has finally shown some signs that he may partially recover from the near fatal heart attack he suffered nine months ago.

The Fifties-Sixties rock great, who'd been in a comatose state for seven months, has been working with a physical therapist for the last month in his room at the Cherry Hills (N.J.) Medical Centre, and is regaining the use of his arms. Joyce McRae, a friend who has spent time at his bedside, reports that Wilson still cannot speak but that he tries to communicate by blinking his eyes and making faces. "It's going to take much therapy," she said, "but the potential is there for recovery. He's very responsive."

WE HEAR that the next Guinness Book of World Records gives the Loudest Rock Band in the World title to Zeppelin, who knocked Deep Purple from their top perch.

Zeppelin were clocked in at a head-splitting 120 decibels at an as-yet-undisclosed concert; Deep Purple's 1972 concert at London's Rainbow Theatre measured 117 — loud enough to render three people unconscious . . . Led Zeppers Robert Plant and Jimmy Page acted like the noise kings of rock during a recent flight from L.A. to London.

Telly Savalas had booked the same flight, and Page and Plant heckled Kojack all the way, calling him "baldy" and other names that one passenger said were "rude."

Savalas kept his cool; at one point he was heard to say to one passenger, "They're just a drunken group who flipped out on the flight, take no notice, baby."

ANYONE WHO follows Elton John knows he's close to his mum (he bought her an estate down the street from his own outside London).

But relations with his dad — Stanley Dwight — have been strained since his father and mother were divorced in 1961, and Dwight has kept a low profile.

That is, until he decided to talk to a reporter from the Daily Mail.

Dwight said he was "proud" of his son, and showed concern because, "he doesn't seem very happy to me. Last time we saw him I asked him who his friends were and he said Elvis Presley and Billie Jean King . . . How can someone you've only just met be described as a friend? I think Reggie has to buy his friendships."

Dwight was just as frank when the subject turned to Elton's music: "I don't think Reggie's all that good even now. . quite frankly some of his songs are rubbish . . ."

We don't look for father-son relations to improve in the near future.

THE BAY AREA'S studio scene is hot these days. La Belle's at Wally Heider's with Herbie Hancock due shortly. David Rubinson is producing both, plus mixing live Santana tapes for a future "King Biscuit Flower Hour" radio show.

Elsewhere: Black Sabbath and the James Gang at Criteria Recording Studios in Miami; David Cassidy at Caribou Ranch, outside Denver; and Bruce Springsteen starring shortly at New York's Record Plant . . . The Champs ('Tequila') are being resurrected by original member Dave Burgess to record Tequila '76.

It's not quite the same group — Jimmy Seals and Dash Crofts are off doing something else, and Glen Campbell isn't available.

Mary Kay Place, who plays Hartman's country-singing next door neighbor, has recorded Baby Boy — the tune Loretta sang on the mock Dinah Shore Show on which she ended her career with an anti-Semitic remark.

★ ★ ★

RECORD COLLECTOR Doug Hanners, of Austin, Texas, has unearthed an early Sixties album called Soundsville (on Design Records) that contains cuts by such biggies as the Beach Nuts and the Rough Necks, among others.

The album sold for 99 cents in grocery stores then, but now it'd fetch up to $20.

The reason: both "groups" included Lou Reed, John Cale and Sterling Morrison, who later blazed trails of decadence as the Velvet Underground, Andy Warhol's pet group of the late Sixties.

Hanners said that one of the Beach Nuts' songs, Cycle Annie, had approximately the same tune and chunk-chunk rhythm of such VU anthems as Heroin. The song is about a girl riding a cycle on the beach, and Hanners said that Reed can be heard laughing on the track "at all the wrong times."

Der Bingle Marks 50th Singing Year

LONDON — Bing Crosby strolled casually Monday night through what he called the most important engagement of his life — his first appearance on a London stage.

It was a milestone in another way — Crosby's 50th anniversary in show business. He brought his family along to sing and dance with him to a packed London Palladium.

He tipped a hat to nostalgia at the beginning and the end but the rest of the three-hour show was new all the way. Bing's family helped with much of it.

He waltzed a little with wife Kathryn, showed off son Harry III's classical guitar, sang to a dance by daughter Mary Frances and sang a roundelay with golfing son Nathaniel.

The 72-year-old crooner joked that he "decided to get off the golf course and back to work when somebody in a Hollywood parking lot looked at me and said, 'Didn't you used to be Bing Crosby?' "

He spent the evening proving he still was. At the end, the audience rose cheering to their feet in appreciation.

After 50s, Of Course —The 60s

LOS ANGELES — The next trend in movies may be nostalgia for the 1960s.

Now that the 1950s have been thoroughly examined, Warner Brothers announces a new film, Big Wednesday, about a group of surfers growing up in Malibu during the 1960s.

The movie, being produced by Alex Rose and Tamara Asseyev, will be directed by John Milius, director of Dillinger and The Wind and the Lion.

TWO 'SWEET CHILDREN' DIE TOGETHER

MIAMI — Two "sweet little children" who told friends they could not live without one another are dead in an apparent murder-suicide. Police said Ray Thompson, 16, shot his girlfriend, Sharon Gabriel, 16, five times, then turned the gun on himself. Sharon was being sent to Italy to spend the summer with her father, who is stationed there with the U.S. armed services.

Richard Nixon will return to public life after the fall U.S. elections, says Rabbi Baruch Korff, one of Nixon's stanchest supporters. Korff added that Nixon plans to make public appearances in the Unied States but "he does not want to be used as a catalyst for either side in the upcoming elections."

MOSCOW — Dissident historian Valentin Moroz, who spent six years in jail only to be incarcerated in a psychiatric clinic early this year, has been ruled sane, his wife Raisa said today. Mrs. Moroz said she did not know where her husband would be taken now. "I hope they move him soon to a labor camp since conditions there are less arduous than in prison," she said.

MONTREAL — The Policemen's Brotherhood criticized the press Monday for its handling of charges last week that police beat city councillor Ginette Reroack. The association said in a statement that the media were prejudiced against the police and gave the story unsually broad coverage. The brotherhood said it did not want to discuss merits of the case since an investigation has been promised.

The Bridge Expert

Before trick two had been completed in today's deal, South learned that he was the victim of a horrendous break in the trump suit. But when the play of the hand had ended, South was a most happy fellow, for he had fulfilled a contract that appeared destined to defeat.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dbl.	Redbl.	2 ♡
2 ♠	3 ♡	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

After South had ruffed West's opening heart lead, he laid donw the ace of trumps. When West discarded a heart on this lead, South was a most unhappy fellow, for East was now known to possess three sure trump winners.

In addition, as declarer surveyed his combined assets, he found himself looking at a club loser and two diamond losers. Putting it mildly, with six losers staring him in the face, declarer was not enthusiastic about his prospects.

To trick three he led a club to dummy's king, after which he ruffed a second heart. Dummy was then re-entered via the club ace, and a third heart lead was ruffed by South. A diamond was next led to the board's king, and dummy's remaining heart was trumped by declarer. The ace of diamonds was then cashed.

Nine tricks had been played up to this point — and South had won all of them. Barring an earthquake, or some similar type of catastrophe, nothing on earth could prevent South from cashing his king of trumps, for his tenth and game-going trick. And so the doubled contract was fulfilled.

It is perhaps interesting to note that South's last three cards, the 8-6 of diamonds and the eight of clubs, were covered by West's Q-J of diamonds and queen of clubs. East's last three cards were three high trumps. Thus, with three tricks remaining to be played, the defenders possessed six sure winning tricks. But, according to law, they were permitted to cash only three of them.

In conclusion, my sympaties are extended to East. With his partner having made an original takeout double, East, with four "sure" winners in his hand, certainly figured to slaughter South. But, as was demonstrated, appearances can be deceiving.

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21 - April 9): Accent on settling of debts—being compensated for handling added responsibility. Someone is giving you a "song-and-dance" instead of financial renumeration. Correct that situation. Refuse to sell yourself short.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Lunar cycle high—take initiative. Personality sparkles—personal magnetism soars. Take chance on your own abilities. Let go of past. Be more independent in thought, acton. Highlight creativity. Aries, Libra could figure prominently. You gain wider acceptance, recognition.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Study Taurus message for valid hint. Make inquiries. Take nothing for granted. Visit one confined to home, hospital. Highlight independence; get to heart of matters. Leo, Aquarius persons are in picture.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with wish fulfillment, romantic interlude, cementing of friendship. A relationship grows — you mature and you assume additional, emotional responsibilities. Aquarius could be very much in picutre.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Emphasis on career matters, standing in community, making room for yourself at top. Key is humor, versatility, willingness to expand horizons. What appears to be a obstacle is actually a healthy challenge. Know it and respond accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Long-range possibilities come in to focus. You perceive what's ahead. You write, publish, communicate. Long-distance calls clarify puzzles. Complications appear greater than they are—know it and be persistent. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Dig deep—if you are determined, you locate "missing link." Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture. Accent on partner or mate in connection with money, possessions. Be prepared for change, variety, travel. Do some detective work!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Lie low—refuse to be rushed to judgment. Accent on partnership, legal papers, marital status. Taurus figures very much in picture. Do plenty of observing, listening —you will detect subtle signals. Attorney may seek your advice!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Perfect techniques. Study Scorpio message. Avoid self-deception. Attend to basic issues. Work, health, recreation—these command more-than-usual attention. Pisces person gives you demonstation of extrasensory perception!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Involvement is featured —nothing is tepid. It is hot or cold, all or nothing. Feelings rise — you express yourself in graphic, dramatic manner. Young person is very much in picture. You are revitalized —and get excellent "money news."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Completion of transaction is featured. Close deal. Finish with project—get on with something new. To hang on to past would be serious error. Know it and act accordingly. Aries, Libra and Scorpio figure in scenario. You'll get "missing information" regarding property and value.

PISCES (Feb. 9 - March 20): You'll be going here, there, in many directions. You're more dynamic now — you get important messages and morale gets boost. Reunification with relative might be highlighted. Leo, Aquarius maybe in picture. Dine out.

IF JUNE 23rd IS YOUR BIRTHDAY You are analytial, could write, are fond of travel, attractive to opposite sex. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. In October, you'll be back on your feet—emotionally and in financial sense, too. Now prepare and plant seeds. Emotional wound will heal.

GARDENING

Ask Before You Buy Garden Items

A rather unusual question has been posed by several gardeners over the past weeks. In a way it is difficult to understand why it should be asked, and in my opinion the anser lies with the questioner.

Basically, the question is this: Why are dealers allowed to advertise at special prices commodities that are not needed in the average garden?

It would appear these gardeners have purchased advertised specials without any knowledge of the product or how it should be used. This has resulted in four bags of lime on hand for a garden that contains no plants that require, or could possibly benefit from, the use of lime. As should be expected, the seller is showing no inclination to make a refund.

Several other gardeners have purchased large quantites of peat-moss, spreading it over the garden and mixing it into any vacant soil. Vegetable plants are now stunted, green-black in color, and failing to make any headway because the soil is far too acid in reaction, and is likely to remain that way for several years.

When the cause of the problem is explained, the gardener considers the vendor is at fault for offering the product for sale and not warning purchasers of possible harmful effects if used wrongly.

This attitude seems unreasonable. There are thousands of products offer for sale, some extremely dangerous to use, but none of us are compelled to buy them, nor can we hold the seller responsible for offering them for sale.

We are bombarded with specials on radio, TV, and in magazines and newspaers. Homes, autos, boats, clothing, household appliances, paints, lumber, you name it, at prices we are told we cannot afford to pass up, but we don't buy any of them unless there is a need.

There are hundreds of gardening gadgets and products for which the average gardener has no use whatever and therefore has no reason to buy. If the gardener cannot resist buying, and the product or gadget proves useless, it is his error and not the fault of the dealer.

Fertilizer is another product gardeners buy in quantity without any knowledge of its make-up or its uses. It has been said the fertilizer manufacturers make their millions on the quantity that is wasted, not on the small amount that is beneficial to plants.

Each fertilizer mix is designed for a specific purpose or type of soil, and many gardeners find themselves with a mix totally unsuited for their soil, or any plants they grow.

The fault lies squarely on the shoulders of the gardener who buys on impulse and asks questions later. This is a perfect way of wasting hard-earned dollars, and it can also lead to a lot of unnecessary gardening problems which can be difficult, or even impossible to correct.

What help can be offered?

Only this: Before making a purchase ask all the pertinent questions and obtain answers that are satisfactory to you. If the seller cannot answer, borrow a library book and find out all the details.

Don't buy gardening products on impulse just because they are offered at a so-called "special."

Be sure your plants need the product and will benefit from its use.

309 IN MEMORIAMS

DAVENPORT — In loving memory of my beloved daughter Shirley Ann Davenport (nee Brodie) who passed away June 22, 1969.
To hide my sorrow I always try
I smile with others — alone I cry.
These words are written with sad regret
Of a daughter I loved and will never forget.
No longer here my life to share
But in my heart she's always here
Forever loved and missed.
A heart of gold stopped beating
Hardworking hands at rest
God broke my heart to prove to me — He only takes the best.
—Always loved and remembered—
Mom.

DAVENPORT — In loving memory of a dear sister, Shirley Davenport (Brodie) who passed away June 22, 1969.
Heavy are our hearts today,
Memory brings you back once more,
To the time when you were with us
To the happy days of yore.
—Always remembered by her sister Joan Cragg.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Scandal Widens

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan's Lockheed-bribes scandal took a new turn today with the arrests of a former managing director of the giant Marubeni Corp. and three senior executives of All-Nippon Airways.

It was one of the biggest developments in the case since the Tokyo public prosecutor's office and police began investigating bribes paid by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to promote the sale of its planes in Japan.

The four arrested men have yet to be formally charged.

Toshiharu Ohkubo, who resigned as a managing director of Marubeni after giving testimony before a parliamentary committee inquiring into the scandal, was being held for questioning at the public prosecutor's office.

Sources in the public prosecutor's office said he was arrested on suspicion of perjuring himself during his parliamentary testimony.

The Marubeni trading company was the agent for Lockheed in Japan, although it has said it will sever its ties with the U.S. aircraft manufacturer.

Shortly before Ohkubo's arrest, police took into custody three executives of the domestic All-Nippon Airways, which bought 21 Lockheed TriStar jetliners.

They are the airline's managing director, Yuji Sawa, 58, its accounting department head, Hisayori Aoki, 38, and its head of business-operations headquarters and international department, Tadao Ueki, 47.

Police said they were accused of having received a total of 51,065,000 yen ($170,217) from a former Tokyo representative of Lockheed in violantion of the foreigh-exchange and trade-control law.

Police said the three airline executives were suspected of having received 20,720,000 yen ($69,067) in mid-June 1974, and 30,345,000 yen ($101,150) in mid-July of the same year from A. H. Elliott, then Lockheed's Tokyo representative.

The police must send the documents on the case to the public prosecutor's office, which decides whether or not formal charges will be laid.

W. German Red Spies Having a Tough Time

Manchester Guardian

FRANKFURT — Communist spies in West Germany are having a hard time. Ever since the arrest in April, 1974, of former Chancellor Willy Brandt's personal aide, Gunter Guillaume, who was found to be a captain in the East German army's intelligence service, West Germany's counter-intelligence has achieved a number of spectacular successes.

The latest came this month with the disclosure of the big East German spy ring operating in the West German government. Fifteen men and women including three civilians employed in the defence ministry were arrested and charged with spying for East Germany. West German security authorities have uncovered at least five major cases of espionage this year.

What are the reasons for these successes? Has West German counter-intelligence really gained the upper hand in the fight against Communist infiltration?

The shock caused by the Guillaume affair led to several reforms in the three main security services. In an interview with the German magazine Der Spiegel, the president of the federal office for the protection of the constitution, Richard Meier, talked about "new methods" that would soon lead to further successes in the fight against espionage. Although he declined to give a detailed description of these techniques, he stressed that Communist secret service had made "vital mistakes." They had fallen prey to thheir own techniques, he said. They wanted to know a lot and had neglected the security of agents.

They had used the same methods repeatededly and the West Germans has now succeeded in analyzing the typical nature of these techniques and had at last found the key to success. All foreign secret services, he said, left behind traces of their work. "We have developed a number of systems of detection, which are geared to finding these traces."

It was only a question of time, he continued, before agents working in the system were found out. He agreed that it would be a long struggle considering that there are thought to be between 3,000 and 4,000 foreign agents in West Germany. Estimates of up to 16,000, he said, are unrealistic.

Last year, preliminary inquiries were held in 647 cases of suspected espionage, 8 per cent more than in 1974. This year there have been over 300. Three-quarters of the espionage cases that have been uncovered originated in East Germany. A considerable proportion give themselves up to the authorities. They are often "harmless" and not always "genuine."

The East German ministry of state security was recently reported to have been more generous and wiser in the recruitment of agents. Whereas formerly the sort of contract with fixed payments was offered and accepted — often under pressure—there is now said to be a looser arrangement with occasional perks, like a gift, an attractive holiday and other benefits. This tends to mitigate the feelings of guilt in those who might feel trapped after signing a contract and try to save themselves by going to the police. Therefore, the number of undetected cases is thought to be growing. A figure of 90 per cent is mentioned by experts.

One of the first steps to be taken after the Guillaume affair was the co-ordination of the three security services by the federal chancellor's office. The federal office for the protection of the constitution, which is responsible for counter-intelligence within the federal republic, the Military Counter-intelligence Service (NAD), responsible for fighting espionage activities in the federal armed forces, and the Federal Intelligence Service (BND) whose job it is to gather information from abroad.

Investigations into affairs affecting state security are conducted by the federal attorney general who runs a special unit of the federal criminal investigations department for state security. Officials of these federal secret service have no arrest powers. Although the security services are separate, there is close co-operation and frequent exchanges of information between them.

BAWLF SUGGESTS FERRY SHUFFLE

Bawlf said today the proposal calls for the Queen of Surrey, currently out of service, to replace the Princess Marguerite on the Seattle-Victoria run.

B.C. Fed Weakened Says Guy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, says the federation convention in November must decide if the organization will be changed in response to a campaign by unionists who want the present federation administration replaced.

In a speech Sunday he said that during the 1972-75 period of NDP administration "our position was weakened by some unions and union leaders siding with politicians against the trade union movement."

Dog Bylaw a Stinker to Enforce

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Becoming a pooper-scooper, — one of a group of individuals who will enforce this municipality's dog bylaw — is not exactly a sought-after profession.

Dog-dropping bylaws seem to be the latest craze in the Lower Mainland. Vancouver city council took a long look at establishing one, but recently decided against it. Richmond is currently preparing its own.

But in West Vancouver, the only municipality with a law making it illegal for a dog to relieve himself on public property, the local enforcement officials are still snickering.

"It's an idiotic bylaw and it could only happen in West Van," Sgt. Ted Scott said in an interview Monday.

"Good Lord, what are you supposed to do? Scoop up the evidence and put it before a magistrate? He'd have you thrown out of the court!"

The same type of reaction was offered by the municipal pound, where one employee wondered if they had the public respect to hand out tickets to the owners of wayward dogs. The bylaw carries a maximum fine of $500.

"What are we supposed to do, walk up to someone with a ticket book and ask them their name. They'll just stare at us."

Faced with this opposition, the municipality is trying to find other ways to enforce the bylaw, which was passed April 12. So far, no charges have been laid under it.

STUDY BIASED SAYS STUDENT

The commission investigating the availability of higher education in non-metropolitan areas came under attack in Victoria Monday from a student representative of the National Union of Students.

Ross Powell, an NUS committee member from Simon Fraser University charged both the commission's head, Dr. William Winegard and the advisory members were biased.

During a hearing in Holyrood House, one of 12 such hearings in the province, Powell presented a brief supporting the need for a degree-granting university outside the metropolitan areas, and then questioned the credibility of Winegard and the commission advisors.

He said the NUS does not feel Winegard would be impartial as stated by Pat McGeer, minister of education, who appointed Winegard May 5 to head the commission.

Powell said while Winegard was president of Guelph University student fees were cut off and the student union was dissolved.

He also alleged $1 million in student money slated for a student union building was appropriated by the university and used to build a University centre and administrative building instead.

He also claimed Winegard's background was biased in favor of university extension progroms.

Of the eight advisers to Winegard, two were from the University of B.C., two from SFU and one from UVic, leaving only three from the interior, Powell said.

Powell said those participating in the hearings and the public had the right to be assured the briefs and other relevant information will be fairly assessed by the commission and the government.

Winegard called the charges old hat and said he had more serious attacks levelled at him.

Winegard said the student's organization was in serious financial trouble at Guelph, and the students were so hung up on mistrust of university administration they wouldn't compromise and got deeper in debt.

It was at this point the university took over the student union forming a government that lasted two years.

He said the SUB building couldn't be financed and the new design which included student union facilities was approved.

The hearings end Saturday in Vancouver. Winegard said although he hasn't reached any decisions, the message is clear that the interest for people wanting degrees is there, and that people don't want to have to come to the coast to get them.

Critics Voice Fears Over Revelstoke Dam

REVELSTOKE (CP) — Economic, environmental and social concerns were raised Monday at a hearing into British Columbia Hydro's proposed $1.2-billion dam planned for three miles north this southeastern B.C. city.

Environmental groups and the city government expressed fears about the effects the 530-foot high, mile-wide power project would have.

The hearing was held by the provincial comptroller of water rights and deals with Hydro's application for a water licence to build the Revelstoke Dam.

Initial notice of 25 objections to the licence was made before the comptroller, Howard Debeck, with more expected once the hearings resume Sept. 13.

City council said it considered safety the main factor in opposing the dam. Council suggested two dams be built to minimize the danger of massive flooding similar to that produced by the Teton Dam collapse earlier this month in Idaho.

Council also asked that B.C. Hydro be required to provide the city with compensation to "repay the community for the permanent loss of environmental features, economic potential and social and personal security now enjoyed by the community."

Hydro has already offered the city $250,000 for the start of expansion of its water system and $1 million for a community centre, but neither offer has been accepted.

The mammoth project calls for approximately 90,000 cubic feet of water a second to be diverted from the Columbia River and the storage of 1.5 million acre-feet behind a combined concrete and earth-filled dam. The resulting lake would be 80 miles long and have a surface area of 28,000 acres.

Harvey Andrewsac, acting regional director for the provincial fish and wildlife branch in the Kootenays, said Monday the branch is "seriously concerned with the rushed nature of this project and the consequent inadequate lead time that was made available for studies related to fish and wildlife concerns."

Graham Kenyon, a director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation said that Hydro is misleading the public about the immediate need for the dam.

He said the corporation's forecast of nine per-cent-a-year increase in power demand is not accurate.

"Actual demand is increased by only four per cent over the past two years and other competent agencies are forecasting growth rates in the order of four to five per cent ... for the future," he said.

Massive Undersea Mining Boon for B.C.: Gibson

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia should bolster its sagging economy by plunging into undersea mining on a massive scale, provincial Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Monday.

"It seems to me we have all that's required for undersea development — the promise of rich resources there, plenty of access and expertise and experience available from many parts of the world," he told the B.C. Association of Professional Economists.

Government should involve itself in the marine program if the private sector fails to take up the challenge, he said.

"It may be that no single company would be capable or willing to start such a venture on its own. In that case, government would be justified in helping form a consortium of private businesses.

Talks Break Off

VANCOUVER (CP) Contract talks between Gibraltar Mines and striking mine-workers at the company's McLeese Lake division in the Cariboo have broken off. The workers have been on strike for more than three months.

Union Bid Fails

PRINCETON (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board Monday rejected an application by the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers for certification of workers at Brenda Mines near Peachland in the central Okanagan.

The board said CAIMW had failed to sign up the necessary number of workers as stipulated by the provincial labor code.

TRADE OPPOSED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Designating embalming and funeral arranging as a trade will lead to more elaborate and expensive funerals, the Memorial Society of British Columbia says in a brief opposing its addition to the provincial Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act.

"Giving recognition to embalming as a trade or as part of a trade appears primarily to serve the profit motive of the funeral industry," society president George Bryenton told the provincial apprenticeship committee Monday.

The Memorial Society, with a membership of 80,000 in B.C., is a non-profit organization which promotes dignity and simplicity in funeral rites and assists in planning the disposition of members' remains before death.

Bryenton said embalming is not required by law except when a body is to be transported out of the province.

Fearful, Before Prison Drama

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The inquest into the death of prison worker Mary Steinhouser was told Monday that 10 days before she and 14 others were taken hostage at the British Columbia Penitentiary last June, prisoner Andrew Bruce asked her how she would feel if she were taken hostage.

Kenneth David Warren, a fellow classification officer and a hostage in the 41-hour ordeal, said that after Miss Steinhouser told him of the conversation, he realized "she was really afraid."

Warren told coroner Doug Jack and the seven-man jury Miss Steinhouser had mentioned to him before that she was afraid and was going to quit her job.

Miss Steinhouser was killed by a bullet through the heart when a prison tactical squad rushed prisoners Bruce, Claire Wilson and Dwight Lucas, to end the hostage drama. The shot was fired by a member of the tactical squad.

Bruce and Lucas were expected to testify today under tight security, as Jack and the jury moves the court inside the penitentiary walls.

Lawyer Robert Bellows, representing the three prisoners at the inquest, said that he anticipated testimony by Bruce that fear of being sent back to solitary confinement was the motive for the hostage taking. The solitary confinement unit at the prison was subsequently ruled to be a cruel and unusual punishment.

Labor Air Clears On Waterfront

VANCOUVER (CP) — The relationship between union and employers on the Vancouver waterfront is so improved that the employers are not seeking a replacement for their former chief negotiator, Richard Hubber-Richard, B.C. Maritime Employers' Association chairman, said in an interview Monday.

"Things are running so well and our relationship with the union is so improved that we don't want to change things," he said.

The former negotiator, Alex Cregan, who was also employers' association president, was fired a year ago over disagreement between him and the association as to the right approach to labor problems on the waterfront.

Don Garcia, Canadian area president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, said the improved relations show that the collective agreement is working.

It has called for a joint union-management committee to look into problems for some years, he said, and this is starting to work well now.

Since last fall, he added, the Canadian area officers have been meeting with the executive committee of the employers' group to air problems outside the collective agreement.

Asked what has caused this improvement in relations, Garcia said, "Well, things were never really that gloomy. I guess as time goes by wounds heal. But I can't really give you an answer as to why it has happened."

Waterfront operations in Vancouver have been marred by strikes over the past 20 years, and just one year ago an arbitrator referred to "bitterness" and "intransigence" on the part of union and employers.

Hubber-Richard said the situation today "is better than we have seen it in years," and he attributed this to a willingness to sit down and talk things out on a continuing basis.

U.S. Envoy Warns of New Oil Embargo Fears

ENDERS

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada and the United States will be vulnerable to a new oil embargo at least into the early 1980s, U.S. ambassador Thomas Enders warned Monday.

At the same time he said that his country like Canada firmly rejects the concept of a continental energy policy.

"To build a new relationship of confidence, if that is desired by both sides, we will have to proceed step by step. But what is required is a clear sense of direction.

"The U.S. is ready to commit higher levels of co-operation if you in Canada are," he said in a major address on energy to the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce.

A text of his speech was released here.

He cautioned that so long as both countries are dependent on imports of oil, the oil exporting countries which "as yet recognize no compelling interest in our well being" retain power over millions of jobs in Canada and the U.S.

A new relationship of confidence has to be established between the two countries, he suggested.

Neither country will again commit itself to dependence on the other for supplies or markets without assurance that it will not be "leveraged."

In addition, he said, the people in both countries had to change their habits.

Profligate consumption must give way to frugality.

For both countries to meet the energy shortages will require massive capital investments, large scale oil and gas discoveries in frontier areas, sharp increases in coal use, continued rapid development of nuclear power, domestic energy prices at or near world levels, a much higher investment in environment protection and substantial conservation efforts, Enders said.

"If we carry through on current policies the next ten years look manageable, except for oil where both countries recognize the need to do more. But the real crunch may come later in the last years of the century when oil and gas supplies begin to run out," said the ambassador.

"Both countries are operating too close to the margin to take such risks," he said.

Each country will have to solve their own energy problems at home by and for his own society.

The options of both countries are sufficiently costly and difficult, the chances of failure sufficiently great, so that both will have a permanent interest in specific modes of co-operation that make each of the systems work better, he pointed out.

Because of the urgency some Canadians are claiming that the U.S. is pressuring Canada into a joint pipeline, imposing massive capital input, with disregard for native claims and ecological disruption, said the embassador.

"That is not true," he said.

"Only you can propose a pipeline across Canadian soil, not the Americans. Clearly no proposal can be made without the most careful evaluation of its impact on nature and the rights of the native peoples.

"Moreover we have a good alternative to the Canadian routes in the all-U.S. pipeline.

"Indeed many Americans think it is better because it uses an existing pipeline route in Alaska and does not require dependence on you (Canada)," he said.

What is true, he added, is that the timetable is tight and that it will be difficult for Washington to consider Canadian alternatives if the Canadian government does not take the initiative to put them forward by early next year.

Canadian regulatory proceedings are likely to conclude around the end of the year so that if Canada decides to discuss a joint line, the Canadian and U.S. timetables will dovetail, he said.

Danson Backs Habitat

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson brushed off attempts Monday to label as cynical the government's behaviour at the recent United Nations Habitat conference on human settlements in Vancouver.

Habitat "raised immeasurably the level of consciousness through the world," he said.

Danson, president of the conference attended by 125 countries, was replying to comments during debate on a motion by the New Democratic Party branding as cynical the government's position on three main Habitat issues — land speculation, nuclear and water pollution.

John Gilbert (NDP — Broadview), said Canada took a weak position on all three issues, playing the role of "compromiser, waffler and vacillator."

Gilbert took particular exception to Canada's refusal to accept a resolution stating that excessive, unearned profits resulting from land speculation should be recaptured by public bodies.

. . . After Bitter Attack

VANCOUVER (CP) — Failure by the Western powers to endorse the Habitat declaration of principles was "the direct result of a straight doublecross by the United States" Hugh Keenleyside, associate commissioner general for Habitat, said Monday.

Keenleyside said the Western world, "including the United States," agreed on the afternoon of June 11 that because they could not vote for the declaration as a whole due to the anti-Israeli overtones, they would move that the document be voted on paragraph by paragraph.

Immediately after the meeting, the U.S. went over to the African and East European group and made a deal to vote on the declaration as a whole, he said.

Keenleyside said the U.S. did this without regard to its promise to the other Western countries.

"It was a straight doublecross," he said.

Protection For Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department has purchased 270,000 condoms for $10,260. They will be distributed free to the country's 75,000 male servicemen.

They are provided to servicemen mainly for the prevention of disease, a spokesman said.

ONLY 3 MPs ABSENT

Death Penalty Out by 8 Votes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A bill to abolish capital punishment in Canada was given approval in principle by a vote of 133 to 125 in the Commons today.

It now goes to committee for clause-by-clause study and possible amendment.

All three major parties divided on the issue as MPs participated in a "free vote" allowing them to vote by conscience rather than along party lines.

Clark was the only leader out of step with his party's voting position as Conservatives voted strongly for retention of capital punishment. His lead was followed by Victoria's Conservative MP, Allan McKinnon.

After the vote was tallied, a wave of applause rolled through the ranks of the opponents of hanging, who have been fighting for 10 years now for the moment of victory.

But Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, the bill's sponsor, was pale and restrained. He applauded almost prayerfully.

The eight-vote margin meant that the bill is still on shaky ground.

It must pass through the Commons justice committee, then return to the Commons for third reading.

If it gets through those stages, easy Senate passage is expected.

Only three members weren't present for the vote.

All wanted to keep the death penalty: Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon), Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris), and Albanie Morin (L—Louis-Hebert), who is seriously ill in hospital.

Speaker James Jerome does not vote.

Two of the 264 Commons seats are vacant, leaving a possible vote of 262, including the Speaker, who only votes in a tie.

Their vote was offset by the 16 new Democrats and 18 Conservatives who voted for it.

There were cheers from abolitionists as two rural Ontario Conservatives — Perrin Beatty and Bruce Halliday voted for the bill. They had been wavering.

Simma Holt (L—Vancouver—Kingsway), her fractured leg in a cast, was cheered as she voted to keep hanging. Stanley Haidasz (L—Toronto Parkdale), his head in a white turban as a result of an operation on his neck last week, voted for abolition.

It was one of the heaviest Commons votes in recent years, outdone in the 1970s only by a vote of no confidence in the government May 8, 1974, in which 260 members rose.

They defeated the government 137 to 123.

Ten years ago, an abolition bill sponsored by four private

3 KILLED ON MALAHAT

A two-car head-on collision on the Malahat Monday night took the lives of three people including a 42-year-old woman from Scotland on the second day of her visit to Vancouver Island.

Dead are Elizabeth Reed of Edinburgh, Scotland, Violet Haddow, 61, of Cowichan Station and George Davies, 45, of Sooke.

Their deaths bring to eight the number of persons killed on Island roads since Friday.

The two women were passengers in a car driven by Mrs. Haddow's husband, William, 61.

Both he and another passenger, Mrs. Helen Reed, 79, address not known, were taken to Cowichan District Hospital with multiple injuries.

Haddow was later transferred to Royal Jubilee Hospital where his condition this morning was reported as fair.

Mrs. Reed was listed in satisfactory condition in the intensive care unit of the Duncan hospital.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said the accident occurred at about 10:20 p.m. on a stretch of the Malahat about 21 miles north of Victoria and a mile south of the Bamberton lookout.

Davies, alone in his car, was driving south; the Haddow vehicle was northbound.

A police spokesman said the collision appears to have happened in the northbound lane.

An inquest will be held but no date has been set as yet.

The site of the accident was less than a mile away from where a fully-loaded bread truck sliced a car in two and plunged 50 feet down an embankment early Friday.

Airlines Cut Staff, Sue Pilots for $7M

Times Sews Services

Canada's airlines began laying off their employees today as pilots entered the third day of their refusal to work because of "unsafe flight operations."

Air Canada announced in Montreal that it will begin laying off its 10,000 unionized employees across the country beginning at midnight tonight.

Alberta-owned Pacific Western Airlines said in Vancouver it has shut down its operations and is laying off its 2,000 staff.

Three major airlines also announced in Montreal today a lawsuit claiming at least $7 million in damages from the pilots.

"This claim is open-ended, which means that the amount could increase depending on the length of the strike," said a spokesman for Air Canada, which, along with CP Air and Eastern Provincial Airways, filed the damage suit late Monday.

Air Canada has estimated its daily losses at $3 million since Sunday when the 2,300 pilots delared air space "unsafe for flight operations."

The bilingualism controversy has spread to international airlines as pilots for a major international airline today declared Canadian airspace unsafe.

A spokesman for the pilots' association of Scandinavian Airlines representing pilots from Denmark, Norway and Sweden said the association decided today that it is not safe to fly into Canada. Scandinavian had cancelled flights to and from Mirabel International Airport north of Montreal.

In Victoria, a spokesman for the post office said airmail won't go by air for the duration of the pilot's refusal to fly.

It will mean delays of a day or two for first-class mail headed for eastern Canada.

It will also mean about 270,000 envelopes daily that would have been whisked by air will join about 130,000 heftier bundles as they travel second, third or fourth class out of the city.

All will be transported by truck and train throughout Canada or to United States cities where they can go airmail again.

All mail will now leave Victoria at normal surface mail times: 5:35 a.m., 12:15 p.m., 2 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Ken Maley, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association (CALPA), said in Montreal that even though controllers are back in their towers, the pilot's union had no alternative but to declare the air traffic system unsafe for instrument flight opera-

POLICE CATCH POLICE THIEF

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — The burglar tried to steal an electronic device from a police radio transmitter station. It turned out to be the silent alarm linked to the Bellevue police department.

Police said Monday a search of the burglar's home uncovered numerous stolen items, including electronic gear from the police transmitter station that finally gave the alarm. Also found was equipment needed to make a pipe bomb.

The man, arrested and being held in the King County jail, is a University of Washington engineering student.

Battles Batter Beirut

The fighting—described by neutral sources as major—broke out despite the arrival Monday of a 1,000-man advance party of an Arab league force to police a truce, the 39th such fragile ceasefire in the 14-month-old Lebanese civil war.

Mortar fire could be heard throughout Beirut. The shells showered down on Moslem-held and Christian-held districts, creating new ruins in residential and business areas.

Escorted by Palestinian and Arab gunners, the 200 foreigners, set out from Beirut today on probably the final British-organized convoy to Syria.

The departure of six buses and about 30 private cars carrying nationals of 27 countries, already twice-delayed by fighting near Beirut airport, was put off another two hours until Syria had withdrawn troops from an intersection south of the airport.

CBC TECHS THREATEN OLYMPIC BLACKOUT

MONTREAL (CP) — CBC radio and television programs orginating from Montreal were disrupted today as about 1,100 technicians of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians continued a work stoppage that began Monday.

The French network is replacing local programming on radio with three-hour tapes and with a movie beginning at 11 a.m. on television. The English network is also using tapes on radio and network programming on television.

Technicians said they would return by the early afternoon for CBC regular broadcasting but they would stay away from Olympics programming preparation until their demands are met.

NABET technicians went out Monday morning to back demands to increase their daily expense allowance to $25 from $19. They also want a special bilingualism premium.

Meanwhile, the CBC filed for an injunction in Quebec Superior Court Monday to prevent walkouts by technicians involved in Olympics programming.

In its petition, the CBC said it "could not accept a walkout which would threaten the televising of the Games.

ROOM AT TOP $14.2M CASH

LONDON (UPI) — A syndicate of Arab businessmen who "simply wanted the best hotel in the world" has paid nearly $14.2 million for the Dorchester Hotel.

The McAlpine family, who have controlled the Dorchester since 1931, have resolutely resisted previous offers to buy the hotel overlooking Hyde Park.

But the Arabs made an offer they could not refuse. The buyers paid the money in cash, a spokeswoman at the hotel said today.

Two men, Dr. Lucien Dahdah, a former Lebanese foreign minister, and Sheikh Najib Alamuddin, chairman of Middle East Airlines, concluded the deal on behalf of a company called Pageguide.

They also agreed to pick up a bill for more than $1.77 million for redecorating and refurnishing the five-star Park Lane hotel, owned by the McAlpine family.

"I know very little about the new owners apart from the fact that they have enormous resources," said Lord Pritchard, the man appointed chairman of the new firm.

"They said they simply wanted the best hotel in the world and they've got it," he said.

"I pointed out it would take a long time before they saw a return on an investment of more than nine million pounds (15.9 million)," he said. "They just weren't interested."

The hotel has 290 rooms at around $51 a night, but a suite there costs anything between $89 and $266.

The hotel's managing director, Robin Oldland, said despite its new ownership the Dorchester would be unchanged.

"I look forward to the future with curiosity and enthusiasm," he said. "We shall maintain our discreet dignity, our resolute Englishness — dare I say it? — our stiff upper lip."

Socreds Speak As Opposition Boycotts House

Government MLAs made their speeches and took their votes on government bills, but the opposition benches remained empty throughout the morning sitting.

The opposition had promised to return later today for the normal 2 p.m. sitting.

All NDP members and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Tory leader Scott Wallace started their boycott shortly after midnight Monday at the end of a stormy night sitting which ended in a hail of legislative rule-books directed at Speaker Ed Smith.

The boycott was sparked by a ruling by Smith that a government member had the right to adjourn debate at about 11:30 p.m., effectively cutting off a speech by Gibson on an amendment to the Government Re-organization Act.

The house adjourned but then sat again at 12:01 a.m. in an extraordinary early morning sitting where Smith took about 20 minutes to explain his ruling, to the empty opposition benches.

At the end of the regular night sitting, after a long, angry argument on the ruling, Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert) and Bill King (NDP — Revelstoke-Slocan) threw their rule books in Smith's direction and Lorne Nicolson (NDP — Nelson-Creston) tore the pages from his book and threw them in the air.

COUGAR CLEARED

SASKATOON (CP) — Two charges of assault against Greg Tebbutt of Victoria Cougars, a Western Canadian Hockey League team, were discharged Monday at the conclusion of a preliminary hearing in magistrate's court.

But Tim Williams, Tebutt's team-mate, will face one charge of assault in connection with the same incident when he appears at the September sittings of Court of Queen's bench in Saskatoon.

Black Riots Simmer

JOHANNESBURG — Police with orders to open fire on rioters guarded a tense peace early today in the country's simmering black townships, scene of the bloodiest racial violence in South Africa this century.

Following a weekend lull, the rioting and looting that devastated townships ringing Johannesburg for three days last week erupted anew in widely scattered parts of the country, including the administrative capital, Pretoria.

Justice and police minister Jimmy Kruger told parliament 10 blacks were killed on Monday, bringing the five-day toll of 139 dead — all but two of them black.

Police said 50 of the black victims were shot by police, who fired directly into the rampaging mobs on several occasions.

Kruger denied that all of the casualties were the result of police action but gave no information on the total number hit by police bullets.

Government officials say that many of the blacks were victims of other blacks on a rampage of violence, arson and looting.

Construction Industry Shutdown Feared

Threatened strike action Wednesday by 600 cement masons in Vancouver could trigger a lockout in the B.C. construction industry.

Strike action would coincide with the "very strong possibility" that 4,500 Teamster truck drivers will strike Wednesday in opposition to the federal Anti-Inflation Board's roll-back of their two-year contract.

In the construction industry, the 17 unions negotiating with the Construction Labor Relations Association have repeatedly been told that as soon as one member construction company is struck all unions will b locked out, a union spokesman said today.

The construction industry shut-down, however, may be averted by a counter wage offer by the CLRA.

The CLRA executive are meeting today and if they come up with another wage offer it will be taken back to the 40,000 construction workers for a vote. The procedure could delay action by the masons.

Frank Stevens, spokesman said Monday that the union for the cement masons union, decided to strike after the CLRA rejected its proposal "which is within federal guidelines."

Contracts expired April 31 and the first offer of an 8 percent wage increase was not retroactive, said John Schibli, secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council.

Any offer exceeding the federal guidelines will go back to the membership, said Schibli.

Meanwhile, union officials are reported to be having difficulty trying to keep Teamster truckers under control in the wake of the AIB's rollback of the contract with 97 B.C. trucking companies represented by the Transport Labor Relations Association.

The board ruled the Teamsters' wage increase should be reduced to 18 per cent from 35 per cent. The ruling would lower the hourly rate after two years to $10.28 from $11.76.

The Teamsters are considering an appeal of the board's ruling, which includes two other contracts, but spokesmen said the truckers don't want to wait for that. The general feeling, he said, is that they were double-crossed by federal authorities.

About 1,700 inter-provincial drivers who work for six companies in western Canada have had their wage increase reduced to 8 per cent from 12.4 per cent in a 13-month contract.

The board also ruled that seven Teamsters at an oil supply company here should have their contract increases reduced to 12 per cent from 26.8 per cent over 13 months.

Senator Ed Lawson, Teamsters leader, said he was very disturbed at the board ruling and an appeal might be made.

TOWN TALK

If any tourists travelling on the Black Ball ferry from Port Angeles to Victoria this Saturday have the strange feeling that someone is watching them, they'll probably be right.

In another of their socially significant enterprises, members of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce say they will be "screening various passengers" on the ferry to pick their Tourist of the Month.

There will be similar selections July 31 and Aug. 28, the recipients being showered with various goodies including hotel accommodation, meals and tourist attraction passes.

The Jaycees' news release doesn't explain what the criteria are for picking the winners. But our guess is that hungry-looking tramps need not bother smuggling themselves aboard in the hope of grabbing some freebies.

Boat owners who intend to visit Nanaimo next year you'd better get metric. Port manager John Dunham reports that next year the Nanaimo Harbor Commission will go metric and pleasure boaters tying up at the Commercial Inlet Basin will have to pay the daily rate — adjusted to the length of their boat in metres.

Victoria city council, past and present, received an unexpected accolade this month from Vancouver writer Don Tyrell, editor of Boating News. Berating Vancouver city fathers for spoiling his city's core with "rabbit-warren buildings," Tyrell writes Vancouver has muffed its chance to develop an area similar to the Inner Harbor. He's so right when he says, "We'll never get another chance."

Saanich Liberals are staging a "fun event" this Saturday and Sunday at Island Indoor Tennis in Central Saanich. Dubbed the Great Liberal Tennis Ball, a $40 entry fee offers players a crack at two weeks in Maui (guess where) and organizers are quick to point out that as a political "donation," the real cost after income tax credit and expenses will be less than $14. How about Great Liberal Tennis Racket?

Victoria's hanging basket fame is spreading.

A recent issue of the City of Tallahassee Newsletter ran an article on a parks and recreation project in that Florida community that began: "A beautification project in Victoria, B.C. has been adopted by Tallahassee and involves 118 hanging flower baskets in downtown Tallahassee. . . ."

The Jasmine Garden Circle introduced the idea which gained support of city fathers and was funded through the bicentennial commission.

The second winner of the Los Angeles YWCA achievement award for women is former Victoria Vimie Kilsby, Canadian consul for southern California now holidaying with friends in Oak Bay. Her professional work and efforts given to charities, civic and public affairs were cited in the award for which she was chosen from among 400 others in Los Angeles.

Miss Kilsby was raised in Victoria, attended Sir James Douglas and Victoria High schools and Victoria College before leaving in 1947. She served in the Canadian navy before entering external affairs and among her postings have been Buenos Aires and New Delhi.

In Los Angeles she is an adviser to Scripps College, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Business and Professional Women's Club, the philharmonic orchestra society and several other community organizations.

BETTER SEWERS OPEN WAY TO DEVELOPERS

Saanich Ready to Move

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Saanich is ready now to move ahead with commercial and apartment development in key areas of the municipality as a result of the uprading of sewers, Mayor Ed Lum said today.

He invited developers to come forward with their proposals because many of them could go ahead now that the sewer problem was just about solved.

"In some areas work permits could be issued immediately. In other areas it will be a matter of only 12 months at the most. We are ready for development."

The areas where development will be centred include Shelbourne near Cedar Hill and McKenzie, the area south of Lansdowne road, the Gorge and new development in the Colquitz area including the Roy Road development.

In addition, there will be some development in areas which are tributary to these main areas.

The problem in the past has been overloaded sewer capacity. Saanich was constructing six inch pipelines, when according to recent studies by the capital regional district the lines should have been eight inches in diameter.

The solution, rather than to re-sewer the municipality, has been to build new large trunk lines and divert the sewage flow. This project will be completed within 12 months and developers should begin their projects now to be ready for the changed conditions in the municipality, he said.

The expected development will take the form of commercial and apartment expansion in the Shelbourne area.

In the Saanich panhandle (where it joins Oak Bay and Victoria) south of Lansdowne there will soon be a capacity for apartment development.

The Gorge area will open up for residential development.

The Colquitz-Roy Road area will open up for residential development as a result of new sewer construction. The Roy Road line will require additional sewer capacity in Victora as well, Lum said.

The Saanich trunk line is an 18-inch pipe and narrows to a 15-inch pipe at the boundary at Burnside and Harriet. Lum said the Victoria line will be twinned (a second line will be constructed) and this work will begin very soon. Saanich would pay a large portion of the cost of the sewer line through Victoria to the Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

Saanich's development has been hindered by the lack of sewer capacity through the Macaulay Point outfall.

Now there are three main sewer exits for the municipality and the flexibility of being able to divert into one of the three lines is opening up areas for development.

In recent years, 85 per cent of Saanich sewage went the Macaulay route. About five per cent went directly south (along the Victoria-Oak Bay border) to Clover Point. The other 10 per cent went through the university raea to exit at Finnerty Cove, north of 10-mile point.

Within five years, 25 per cent of Saanich sewage will leave by Finnerty Cove opening up the Shelbourne area to higher density development as well as handling the expansion of single family homes and townhouses in Gordon Head.

Work is already under way in twinning and upgrading small existing sewer lines near Shelbourne to prepare for this additional capacity.

Expansion of apartments into the panhandle south of Lansdowne will be accomplished through use of the sewage line south to Clover Point.

Development in western portions of the municipality will depend upon the upgraded route to Macaulay Point.

In addition to these lines, work is proceeding on a sewer toward the Cordova Bay area. At the present time the flow is from the area south of Cordova Bay toward Macaulay Point. The possibility exists, however, that an outfall could be constructed at Cordova Bay and have the flow in the opposite direction.

This nine-acre parcel of land on the Gorge is being considered for apartment development

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich council voted Monday to hold a public hearing on a land-use contract for the project.

Municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said today the hearing date has not yet been set, but it will probably be in mid-July.

The developers have options on the property which is now owned by John Traunweiser. The property now houses the San Sebastien Motel and the Victoria Motor Court.

Terry Farmer, spokesman for the group, told the Times the apartments will include some rental but will be mostly condominiums. Some will have one bedroom, others will have three bedrooms but the majority will be two-bedroom units.

There will be six four-storey buildings, with an average distance of 140 feet between them to allow passers-by views of the waterway.

The development, to be built in stages, will be in frame construction, Farmer said, in order to keep down costs of the units.

"Every suite will have a view of the Gorge," he said. "The buildings will be jogged with angular windows that all look down on the Gorge."

Architect for the project is Hamilton Doyle of Vancouver.

In the land-use contract prepared by the municipality and the developers, 76 Developments have donated a 40-foot strip along the waterfront from the park up to and including the point on the property. Farmer said the land mostly will be made available for walkways.

A waterfront strip on the rest of the property also will be given to Saanich. Farmer said this would allow Saanich to build a water-level causeway.

Because of sewer problems in the area, Farmer estimated it would be 18 months before the project gets under way.

The land-use contract also allows the developers to build a recreation facility on the site. Farmer said this would include a community building with a lounge, meeting rooms and saunas, as well as an outdoor swimming pool.

He said the project has been two years in the planning stage.

Aldermen were enthusiastic about the project at Monday's meeting. "They're going out of their way to co-operate," Ald. Roy Wootten said of the developers.

In the contract, the developers have agreed to pay part of the costs of installing new sewers in the Gorge area. The amount was not disclosed at Monday's meeting but Ald. John McDonald conceded later that "it's a sizeable chunk . . . upward of $200,000."

The council also approved rezoning to allow an 81-unit apartment complex proposed for 4014, 4020 and 4026 Quadra by the Concord Development Corp.

Because the units will be rental, Saanich stands to gain financial assistance from the senior governments to help in servicing costs — $81,000 from the federal government and $40,500 from the provincial government.

High Tax Dispute: The Buck Passed On

The Mayor and the Citizen today agreed to blame somebody else for high taxes in the continuing battle of the Oak Bay Holdback.

Citizen Larry Slaght has withheld part of his Oak Bay property taxes to protest the 18.86 per cent increase in the mill rate.

Mayor Brian Smith said citizens should protest large tax increases but holding back on taxes is not the way to do it — and they should take care to select the real villain.

The Oak Bay mill rate for general municipal purposes is up only 7.79 per cent, Smith said.

By contrast, the school mill rate is up 27.54 per cent.

In addition, Slaght should be protesting inflationary spending by senior levels of government, particularly Ottawa. The provincial government has increased its spending 12 per cent above the 1975 budget while Ottawa's expenditures are expected to rise at least 14 per cent this year.

"Citizens, who are concerned about taxes aand inflation should bring pressure to bear on the federal government to control its expenditures," Smith said.

"However, I agree with Mayor Smith that the school costs are the main reason my taxes have gone up."

Slaght said the mayors should get together and insist that municipal councils have the power to approve or reject school budgets.

SMITH

"There is a bit of conflict of interest when educators sit on school boards and set their own budgets," Slaght said.

"I think it is good for educators to be on school boards because they have the background and education to deal with that type of problem. But they should not have the final say on the budget. The council should be able to approve or disapprove them."

Slaght has already sent in his partial tax payment, holding back that portion of his taxes above a 10 per cent increase. He selected the 10 per cent figure as being within the spirit of the Anti-Inflation Board guidelines. He said a few other Oak Bay citizens had indicated they would follow his example and hold back their taxes.

He has also sent letters of protest to the Oak Bay council and the school board.

"I know I will have to pay a tax penalty but I am prepared to pay that. It is worth it to make this protest. Somebody has to do something."

Taxes must be paid by June 30 or a five-per-cent-per-year penalty begins on the unpaid portion, starting in July. After three months, this is increased to 10 per cent per year. After three years, the unpaid portion must be paid along with the penalty or a tax sale proceeding could begin.

Meanwhile, Smith said the local mayors have already had one meeting with the school board to try to find out why costs are rising so quickly there and the mayors have asked for another meeting soon.

The first indication from the school board is that somebody else is to blame. The increase, says the school board, was due to a decline in the education grants from the provincial government.

N. Saanich Hearing Tonight

It's round two tonight in North Saanich when a public hearing into a proposed new zoning bylaw continues at 7:30 in the Legion hall.

About 200 people turned out Monday night for the start of the hearing and as anticipated a proposal for a minimum seven-acre lot size sparked the most criticism.

Opponents appeared to outnumber and certainly outtalked proponents. People who own larger sections of land are concerned they will be unable to subdivide as planned, in some cases to produce retirement income.

The crowd was so large Monday night it even produced comments through the hall's windows, as latecomers found themselves waiting outside. Mayor Paul Grieve maintained order by repeatedly refusing to permit clapping, cheering, booing or stamping of feet.

The hearing also received presentations in favor of a commission to hear subdivision applications, occupancy permits to permit in-law suites and against the proposed bylaw's restrictions on building placement and property use.

Vander Zalm, Coroner Hear Different Reports

Department of human resources policies had no connection to the death of a 58-year-old Victoria woman whose friends said she was afraid of being cut off welfare, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday.

Vander Zalm said he has reports which clearly deny allegations that Honor Eastman threw herself in front of a car June 10 because of her fear of having her welfare incentive payments cut.

The minister said he would make the reports public later.

However, at an inquest which began Monday night into the woman's death, David Paterson, 1667 Cedar Hill Road, the driver of the car involved in the accident, testified Mrs. Eastman appeared to have "lunged" into the right side of his car.

Paterson's wife, Margaret, a front-seat passenger, said the woman suddenly appeared and her husband shouted, "That woman, what is she doing?"

"I got the impression more like we were being attacked," she said after the dead woman's daughter, Caroline Free of Calgary, suggested her mother might have fallen accidentally into the car.

City police constable Tom Sibbald told the inquest he had been called to an earlier accident a short distance away where a driver told him a woman had walked into the side of his car and then walked off, saying she had slipped on the pavement.

Sibbald said the driver described Mrs. Eastman at the time as "smiling and normal."

He told coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre and the six-man jury that Mrs. Eastman had suffered from depression and stress with periodic suicidal thoughts and considered her sanity was in jeopardy.

The inquest continues tonight starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Saanich courtroom.

In the Legislature, Norm Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) charged that Vander Zalm's policies have "directly led to the deaths of two people."

He said people in B.C. are "scared to death" of new human resources policies.

Levi said earlier an 81-year-old blind man fell to his death down an open elevator shaft in New Westminster last month because government funds which had been used to hire guides for handicapped people had been cut off.

After Mrs. Eastman's death, Susan Talbot of the Community Action Group where Mrs. Eastman was an incentive worker, said the woman had committed suicide because of the uncertainty about her incentive payments continuing.

"The relations (of Mrs. Eastman) have made it known that they feel terrible about the publicity," the minister said.

"There is no relation, no connection at all between the incident . . . and any policy that might have been adopted by the department," he said.

Levi said outside the house he was concerned about the "aura of fear" surrounding human resources policies.

"They don't know where they stand. Things are not spelled out and people are quite afraid," he said.

SAANICH GIVES Y $57,210

Saanich council Monday agreed to give $57,210 over a four-year period toward the YM-YWCA's extension project.

Some aldermen, however, had reservations on whether or not, when the building is completed, Saanich should increase its share of the grant given the YM-YWCA for taxes.

"We will be looking at the major share of the tax burden," cautioned Mayor Ed Lum. "It's an ongoing thing."

Ald. Mary Casilio said she could not support giving the grant because Saanich's own recreation program had been defeated in the November referendum. "They (the YM-YWCA) are also getting money from the Community Chest," she added.

Ald. Sandy Noel said he would not support entering into any "open-ended agreement," noting that the Racquet Club of Victoria, located in Saanich, was also in need of help.

"They (the Racquet Club) are just about going down the proverbial financial drain," he said. "I'm hoping we can give a little to each but not in one direction."

Ald. Fred Severson said the possibility of giving the Racquet Club a loan was being considered. "If, in the future, they decided to liquidate or sell, we'd get our money back," he said.

Ald. David Paterson, referring to the YM-YWCA's grant instead of taxes, said the intermunicipal committee had studied a similar proposal which would have the YM YWCA returning grant monies if the property is sold or liquidated.

Times Staff

John Young has demanded Victoria school board chairman William Ross' resignation but Ross says he will hang on to his job as tenaciously as Young did when asked to resign as principal of Campbell River high school.

Young, ultimately fired by Campbell River school board in 1972 after a lengthy hearing and now a Victoria businessman, demanded Ross and superintendent of schools Jake Longmore resign, charging they violated the Public Schools Act.

In a fiery presentation to the board, Young claimed this violation led to a pupil being deprived of the right to attend classes for 55 days this spring.

Last week Ross refused Young permission to represent the 15-year-old student and his parents at a committee meeting, prompting Young to submit his brief Monday at the regular board meeting.

YOUNG

Young said a regulation adopted by the board giving the principal of the school the right to dismiss a pupil was in contravention of the Public Schools Act. He told the board he had expert legal advice on the matter.

Ross said the board also had legal advice in drafting the regulation and in his opinion, the section Young criticised had worked very well in getting dismissed students back into classes.

He said the regulation was adopted as an intermediate stop before going to a firm dismissal or expulsion allowed under the schools act.

Ross said in all such cases the board makes every effort to keep the child in school.

Longmore said later in the meeting the provincial government had recently introduced bill 55 which may revise the very section of the Public Schools Act with which Young was concerned.

The revisions, if passed, could give the principals more authority in pupil dismissal — the area Young claimed the board had already given to district principals.

After the meeting, Ross said any time a question of legality of board policies is questioned by any citizen, it is a good idea to undertake a review.

Ross said he wouldn't resign. He said he implemented the school's policies both in spirit and intent in accordance with the Public Schools Act and the board's own policies in this particular case.

"I will be very tenacious in hanging onto my position as Mr. young was determined when asked to resign. If the outcome is the same as Mr. Young's, however, I'm in trouble."

Young's presentation to the board took more than the half-hour allotted to all public delegations and as a result several others including the father of the dismissed pupil, were not allowed to speak to the board.
